Hello! Had enough of bureaucracy? Tired of all the red tape? Concerned about rogue agencies seemingly operating impervious to oversight? I am, too!

A wise man once said, "There is no such thing as a free lunch," but he was wrong!

On Wednesday May 23rd there will be a panel discussion of HB580 featuring the American Principles Project's Erin Tuttle, Greg Lawson of The Buckeye Institute, and Micah Derry of Americans for Prosperity. It will be moderated by Representative Andy Thompson. There will also be a free lunch provided by the parties in question.

House Bill 580, adds oversight and transparency to Ohio executive agencies' applications for federal grants, in an effort to control the rise of the administrative state. The discussion will include how the bureaucracy of our federal and state governments has grown over time, and how this administrative growth has specifically hurt the State of Ohio through federal grants and mandates. We will discuss how HB580 will help address the problem we have with a rising administrative state, and institute oversight via the executive branch.

Volume #87, Report #130 -- Friday, July 6, 2018

Payday Lending Proposal Slated For Rare Summer Action In Senate Next Week

An expected legislative break is being cut short for the Senate as the chamber is set to return next week to continue its work considering a contentious overhaul of short-term lending laws.

The payday lending bill (HB 123) is slated for consideration by the Senate Finance Committee Monday and Tuesday, if necessary. The measure is expected to come up before the full Senate Tuesday morning.

The Finance Committee meetings are expected to be the only committee action of the week.

John Fortney, spokesman for Senate President Larry Obhof (R-Medina), said amendments are expected Monday or Tuesday.

What that language will look like remains unclear.

The committee spent much of last week hearing testimony on the measure and weighing potential changes offered by Sen. Matt Huffman (R-Lima).

Backers of the original language, which would limit fees and interest rates and require repayment to be capped at 5% of the borrower's income, balked at proposed changes in the Senate. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 21, 2018)

Proponents, including the Pew Charitable Trusts, voiced openness to some changes, such as increasing the allowable loan sizes and rates, that would still preserve the overarching framework. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 25, 2018)

Sen. Matt Dolan (R-Chagrin Falls) said this week he had prepared amendments to that effect but wasn't sure whether the committee would work from the House-passed language or from a framework outlined by Sen. Huffman.

"My amendments were directed toward 123 based on what I heard in terms of testimony and in terms of what could help within the structure of 123 to increase the costs a little bit to help out the lenders," he said in an interview.

Those discussions have included increased rates and allowable fees, including raising the limit on what a borrower can be required to pay back to perhaps as high as 10% of their income, Sen. Dolan said.

"That would obviously increase the ability for the borrower to borrow more money," Sen. Dolan said. "We're trying to find that fine line."

Supporters of the initial language have said raising the 5% income limit to perhaps 7% or 8% would be acceptable, but 10% could be too high.

Sen. Huffman's proposals would create a framework around the total costs of installment loans, limiting those to a per diem rate based on the size and duration of the loan. He has said the proposal would also cap the total principal amount a borrower could have out at any one time at $2,500. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 26, 2018)

State Touts Mental Health Parity With Managed Care Integration Of Behavioral Services

With the July 1 carve-in of behavioral health services in Medicaid into managed care, the state says it is now compliant with a 2008 federal law requiring parity for mental health and addiction services.

The departments of Medicaid and of Mental Health and Addiction Services released a report examining compliance by managed care plans in providing parity in patients' access to those services.

The state was initially scheduled to show compliance in October 2017 but received approval from federal regulators to wait until the July 1 integration of behavioral health services into managed care. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 28, 2018)

"That gave us the opportunity to have our implementation dates be the same as our carve-in," Medicaid Director Barbara Sears said in an interview.

The behavioral health integration is a separate effort from the work toward parity, but the state decided to have those dates coincide because of the way it framed its plan with the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, said Patrick Stephan, director of managed care for ODM.

"What we didn't want to do was have to go through the process twice," he said. "Had we not connected this with our integration of behavioral health services into managed care, we would've had to have done it on the fee-for-service side."

Parity means managed care plans will be prevented from having cumbersome prior authorization requirements, limits on service days or other restrictions on mental health services that aren't used on physical health services, Mr. Stephan said.

"At its core, this act requires us to make certain that within Medicaid, and in this case within the managed care plans' administration of the benefit, that we do not have qualitative or quantitative requirements on mental health services that are more stringent than what you would get on the physical side," he said.

Mr. Stephan said the move toward managed care will also help ensure patients' access to mental health services because plans are required to provide that access and can incentivize providers in order to achieve it.

"In the fee for service side, we had very little ability to encourage new providers into the market," he said. "On the managed care side, we have standards that the plans must meet, and if they don't, then they get fined, they get penalized."

Lori Criss, CEO of the Ohio Council of Behavioral Health and Family Services Providers, said parity is key but questioned whether the system has actually achieved the goal.

"Fully implementing and robustly enforcing the Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act of 2008 is critically important to ensure that Ohioans can understand and access the health insurance benefits rightly available to them," she said in a statement. "While we appreciate Ohio Medicaid's compliance report, the analysis appears to lack sufficient detail to support its broad conclusion without review of the underlying assessment documents."

Moving forward, the state will have to ensure parity standards are met, she said.

"The real test will be how well Medicaid promotes transparency and holds the plans accountable for the law's requirements," she said. "The Ohio Parity at 10 Coalition looks forward to working with lawmakers and the administration to raise awareness of the law's benefits to Ohioans, their families and employers."

CAUV 'On the Road To Correction' Following Budget Changes, Group Says

Budget language aimed at alleviating increased costs from rising Current Agricultural Use Values are having their intended impact, the Ohio Farmers Union told state officials recently.

The Department of Taxation each year holds a public hearing in June to brief farmers and interest groups on the latest values and to gather feedback on the subject.

In recent years, the meetings have been the site of much angst as some farmers grapple with sharp increases. During the 2014 tax year, the high watermark, increases were seen as high as 400%. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 2, 2017)

"We had tremendous increase in the CAUV values going back to 2008," said Ted Finnarn, attorney for the organization. "Because of (the changes), the CAUV values have come down and are heading back down to where they should have been."

But the latest meeting came and went with little fanfare, with the union providing the only testimony and praising the recent changes.

"We're finally on the road to correction," Mr. Finnarn said in an interview. "By the 2020 cycle, the CAUV values will be down so farmers have more reasonable taxes."

Gloria Gardner, assistant administrator for the department, said the statewide average value for cropland came in at $1,015 per acre for tax year 2018, down about 27% from 2015 values which were $1,388. The values are updated every three years as counties undergo their appraisal process.

"The values are dropping pretty significantly due to some of the changes that were in House Bill 49 in 2017 and this is the second year of implementing those changes," Ms. Gardner said. "The woodland values are also coming down."

The budget changes, which originated in the Senate, modified the factors to be used in computing the values and placed a ceiling on the taxable value of CAUV land if it is also used for conservation purposes. The changes were phased across two stages over a six year assessment cycle.

"We sort of had a perfect storm - all of these things coming together - and we had extremely high values that were unwarranted and unfair and unprecedented," Mr. Finnarn said. "Now we're on the road to having more reasonable real estate taxes for farmers and woodland owners."

Not all parties were pleased with the budget changes, however. School groups expressed repeated concerns with how the changes might impact their districts, forecasting a 30% reduction in farming property values that would shift the burden onto other property owners.

Barbara Shaner, advocacy specialist for the Ohio Association of School Business Officials, said those fears continue.

"We're still sorting out the results of the most recent information from the tax department but we also think we won't see the full effect for a few more years because not all the counties have undergone their reevaluation," Ms. Shaner said. "We remain concerned and we'll continue to monitor the way it's turning out."

Ed Board Expected To Debate, Vote On Third-Grade Reading Benchmark

The State Board of Education is set to vote to increase the Third Grade Reading Guarantee promotion score next weekend at its monthly meeting.

A proposal to raise the benchmark students would need to meet on the Ohio State Test for third grade English and language arts from 672 to 677 was set for a possible vote by the panel's Achievement and Graduation Requirements Committee last month, but it ultimately delayed its decision. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 12, 2018)

The committee is once again scheduled to discuss the proposal at its 8:30 a.m. Tuesday meeting, with the full board expected to consider the resolution enacting the change later that day. The resolution is set for consideration as an emergency measure, so it would take effect before the start of the next school year.

The state board is required by law to review the third grade language arts benchmark and adjust it upward annually until it reaches 700, which indicates proficiency, according to a memo sent to committee members late last month by the Department of Education's legal staff.

Despite the requirement that the score increase, the committee balked at recommending the promotion score be set at 677 last month, with multiple members asking for more time to discuss the potential change with local school district officials.

District 4 board member Pat Bruns at the time said she was concerned raising the score could mean districts' improvements at teaching young readers would not be reflected in state report cards, sending a "false message" to community members.

An overview of the issue provided by ODE to the committee states that: "Because of the state law, the education community is expecting to see a modest increase in the promotion score. No one will be surprised by an increase."

ODE also argues the change in the overall language arts score from 672 to 677 corresponds to the smallest possible increase in the reading subscore, from 44 to 45.

"It is possible this change will not increase the number or percent of students who are retained. If there is a reduction in the number of students promoted, we would expect it to be small," the overview states.

At-large board member Laura Kohler, the committee's chairwoman, previously said she supports the plan to increase the benchmark to 677 because administrators and teachers have been preparing for it with increased aid from the state.

"We're looking at a different landscape than we were a couple of year ago with the supports that are in place," she said.

Subscriber's Note: The full agenda for the State Board of Education's Monday and Tuesday meeting is available online.

Rover, FERC Staff Spar Over Land Restoration, Pipeline Operations

Rover Pipeline operators, long at odds with state regulators, are now amping up their frustration with their federal overseers.

In recent missives, Rover Pipeline LCC blasted Federal Energy Regulatory Commission staff for what it considers the commission's failure to authorize full operation of a major section of the controversial project. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, June 1, 2018)

The lack of action on FERC's part has left Rover "more than a little baffled," wrote Rover Senior Vice President Chris Sonneborn. But FERC staff said the delays are prompted by Rover's failure to restore land impacted by the project by a June 30 deadline. The company in recent weeks has informed staff restoration efforts are likely to continue until "at least" July 30.

According to Rover, FERC staff in May authorized service to commence on a main segment of the pipeline called Supply Connector Line B. But in doing so, staff withheld granting in-service authorization for two laterals pending further review.

"As a result of staff's inaction, significant volumes of natural gas have been unable to flow on pipeline facilities that have been completed for nearly a month," Mr. Sonneborn wrote. "This is unfortunate, because...the incremental natural gas supply that would have been available to flow would have been used to offset the large deficit the nation is facing to replenish storage inventories in preparation for the 2018-2019 heating season...."

Failure to act soon, the company claims, is outside "the public interest." But FERC declined to be persuaded by the company's comments. Staff instead responded with a formal notice directing the company to complete outstanding restoration activities at those two Ohio sites.

"Because restoration of these facilities was not complete at the time of in-service authorization, Rover committed to completing the remaining restoration activities by specific dates," wrote John Wood, FERC's deputy director of the Office of Energy Projects. "However, commission staff monitoring certificate compliance believes that rover will be unable to meet a number of those commitments...."

As a result, staff directed Rover to take "prompt and immediate action" and to file prior to July 9 a detailed account of why the company cannot adhere to the agreed upon timetable.

"Neither the commission nor its staff takes lightly a pipeline's commitments to restore and rehabilitate affected lands," Mr. Wood said. "Accordingly, the commission expects pipelines to follow through on their commitments to restore and rehabilitate land and other resources disturbed by the construction of a certificated pipeline."

In response, Mr. Sonneborn issued a second letter this week leveling further attacks, accusing FERC staff of making "several inaccurate statements" toward the project and the company's willingness to fulfill its land restoration commitments.

"For the record, and as Rover has stated previously in this docket on numerous occasions, Rover will honor and meet all of its restoration commitments - whether those are scheduled to occur before or after Rover is fully in service," Rover wrote. "Any implication to the contrary is simply untrue."

Rover now is also accusing FERC staff of "a fundamental misunderstanding" of how the restoration process works.

"A company can supply ample resources, equipment, and personnel to restoration efforts; however, the variable of weather, and therefore the pace of restoration, is simply outside of any pipeline's control," Rover wrote. "There is no amount of planning or resources that can change the reality that on any major pipeline project there are always going to be changes to the restoration schedule due to events outside of the pipeline's control."

The company's public pushback accusing FERC of stating falsehoods is much like the back-and-forth Rover has engaged in with the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency. Rover and the OEPA have engaged in a months-long back and forth with Rover accusing OEPA of cooperating with the company in private but taking an adversarial approach in public.

That tiff ultimately led to a lawsuit filed by the state, which Rover and several other defendants have filed to dismiss. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, March 5, 2018)

Public Comments Continue On State, Federal Lifeline Proposals

Stakeholder groups and citizens are continuing their efforts to thwart state and federal proposals that would eliminate in whole or in part a federal discount program for low-income customers.

At the state level, AT&T is proposing to discontinue its participation in the federal Lifeline program - which grants eligible customers a $9.25 monthly credit - in areas in which another provider operates that service.

But the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio has yet to approve that plan and in recent days has urged the public to weigh in via written feedback.

Meanwhile, the Federal Communications Commission is weighing a similar but more far-reaching plan that would largely eliminate the resource for a swathe of customers across the country. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 23, 2018)

In the PUCO case, comments have been submitted from a handful of citizens as of Friday, each urging the commission to deny AT&T's plan and maintain the program.

Several commenters described themselves as licensed social workers working with elderly populations. Others are customers who benefit from the program and who labeled the company's attempt to cut it "indefensible" and "abhorrent."

AT&T, for its part, has emphasized that no Ohio customer will lose voice service through the move but will instead receive it at the standard rate. Customers are free, it said, to receive the Lifeline discount from other providers in those areas.

The move "will have only a nominal impact on Ohio consumers who have demonstrated a clear preference for obtaining their Lifeline discount from (companies) other than

AT&T," the company said. "Over the past eight years, AT&T has seen its own Ohio Lifeline subscribership shrink by 94%."

Advocates, though, caution the move would strip vulnerable Ohioans of a valuable resource. The Ohio Consumers' Counsel and the Greater Edgemont Community Coalition are among those protesting the idea. In part, they've urged commissioners to solicit public input and take the federal case into consideration. (Docket)

In the federal case, the Federal Communications Commission is proposing changes critics say will erect more barriers for Lifeline consumers nationwide. There are about 608,000 total subscribers in Ohio, according to proponents of the program.

The PUCO and the Ohio Consumers' Counsel are among parties that have submitted comments in opposition to the federal proposal.

Under the proposed changes, eligible consumers must enroll online first through a third-party verifier and then through a specified carrier. Currently, the customer can enroll directly through their provider.

Proponents of the Lifeline program this week were denied a stay in the case when regulators determined the parties were unlikely to prevail on the merits and would not suffer irreparable injury.

In response, Q Link, the nation's third-largest Lifeline provider, on Thursday filed an emergency motion that if approved would enact additional changes to enable carriers to collect customer information directly from the third-party verifier.

Q Link serves about 40,000 Lifeline customers in Ohio. Sixty-seven percent reside in rural or suburban areas and 82% are new to Lifeline, which the company said indicates they were previously unserved by and may not have access to other providers.

"The...proposed change will be unnecessarily difficult and confusing for consumers," said Q Link CEO Issa Asad in a statement. "Beyond the impact on rural Americans, which will be significant, the new system's failure to include automated links with carriers will unnecessarily cost taxpayers tens of millions of dollars."

'Sweeping' Changes In Store After Federal Regulators Reject PJM Capacity Market Plans

Federal regulators voted along party lines recently to toss aside two proposals from PJM Interconnection to revamp the capacity market, paving the way for a potentially drastic shake up in the months ahead.

PJM in April submitted two competing proposals for FERC's consideration on how to best overhaul the market. But in the end, the commission's 3-2 order went far beyond simply rejecting the proposals and instead paves the way for what one dissenting commissioner labeled "sweeping" changes for the grid operator that serves 13 states. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, May 7, 2018)

In short, the commission determined subsidies for renewable and nuclear sources have rendered PJM's current tariff "unjust, unreasonable and unduly discriminatory" in that it fails to ensure adequate competition. FERC is now proposing to expand the minimum offer price rule - which enacts a screening process to gauge the competitiveness of new resources - among other changes.

"We find...the PJM Tariff allows resources receiving out-of-market support to significantly affect capacity prices in a manner that will cause unjust and unreasonable and unduly discriminatory rates in PJM regardless of the intent motivating the support," the majority wrote. "We are compelled...to conclude that out-of-market payments by certain PJM states have reached a level sufficient to significantly impact the capacity market clearing prices and the integrity of the resulting price signals on which investors and consumers rely to guide the orderly entry and exit of capacity resources."

Stakeholder groups in Ohio and beyond are still parsing the details of the 106-page order, but they have a short timetable to digest its ramifications. After the 60-day comment window, parties have 30 days for reply comments after which FERC wants to reach a solution.

PJM issued a statement stating its pleasure that FERC is taking action.

"The order appears to be a positive step to change competitive electric market design while recognizing the important role states play in influencing the resource mix through retail energy policies," according to PJM. "We will begin work immediately to develop the kind of bifurcated capacity construct envisioned by the commission and actively engage stakeholders, including the states, within the timetable laid out by the commission."

But FERC's two Democratic members issued scathing dissents regarding the substance of the order and the timeline laid out by the majority.

"Let's be clear: through its action today, the majority signals its intent to adopt, through a 90-day paper hearing, the most sweeping changes to the PJM capacity construct since the market's inception more than a decade ago," Commissioner Cheryl LaFleur wrote in her dissent. "If ultimately adopted, this proposal would fundamentally rebalance the resource adequacy responsibilities of the states, the commission, and PJM."

Commissioner Richard Glick said the commission in its order "entirely fails" to demonstrate its claims the market is unjust and further criticized the timeline.

"Requiring interested parties to decipher today's order, develop testimony, gather evidence, and meaningfully respond within 60 days is irresponsible," he said. "On top of that, this short timeframe essentially guarantees that PJM will not be able to work with the states to develop a proposal that aligns with state policies."

Agency Briefs: Hurst To Replace Plouck At ODMHAS; U.S. Unemployment Rate Up; OSHP; ODNR

Dr. Mark Hurst will replace Tracy Plouck as director of the Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services next week as Ms. Plouck, a longtime administration official, leaves for the private sector.

Gov. John Kasich announced Dr. Hurst's appointment Friday. He will take over the department effective July 13.

Ms. Plouck has been in Gov. Kasich's cabinet since 2011 and has twice served as state Medicaid director. She also served as deputy director in the Department of Developmental Disabilities and the Office of Budget and Management.

"I'm extremely grateful to Tracy Plouck for her leadership, compassion, counsel and service to Ohio," Gov. Kasich said. "She has a servant spirit and exemplifies the best in public leadership. She is a model for other leaders to follow and I wish her and her family all the best in this new chapter of their lives."

Dr. Hurst has served as medical director at ODMHAS since 2012 and has been at the department since 1993.

"Dr. Hurst's leadership, insights and compassion have distinguished him as a valuable member of our team and contributed mightily to the progress Ohio is beginning to make against addiction and to lift up our fellow Ohioans struggling with mental illness," Gov. Kasich said in a statement. "I appreciate that he's agreed to take on this responsibility. The work ahead is monumental and the challenges will continue to shift, but his leadership has been-and will continue to be-an enormous asset in Ohio's efforts in these areas."

Unemployment: The U.S. added 213,000 jobs in June despite a loss of jobs in retail trade, but the unemployment rate rose to 4% as more people re-entered the labor force, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Friday.

The unemployment rate rose by 0.2 percentage points to 4% as the number of unemployed people rose by nearly 500,000 to 6.6 million, the BLS reported.

The overall labor force grew significantly, rising by 601,000, with the labor force participation rate rising 0.2 percentage points to 62.9%, the report said.

The survey found job gains of 50,000 for the month in professional and business services. Manufacturing employment grew by 36,000, mostly in durable goods manufacturing, including fabricated metal products (+7,000), computer and electronic products (+5,000) and primary metals (+3,000).

Motor vehicles and parts manufacturing bounced back from a loss of 8,000 jobs in May with a gain of 12,000 in June, the report found.

Health care employment was up 25,000 for the month, construction was up 13,000 and mining was up 5,000.

Retail trade lost 22,000 jobs, a month after seeing a gain of 25,000 in May.

State Highway Patrol: The patrol reported eight people were killed in four deadly crashes during the Fourth of July reporting period Tuesday and Wednesday. Impairment was a factor in at least one of the deadly crashes.

During last year's reporting period, from June 30 to July 4, there were 21 fatal crashes that killed 21 people, including eight OVI-related crashes, the patrol said.

Troopers made 296 impaired driving arrests and 276 arrests on drug charges. They responded to 297 crashes and assisted more than 2,000 motorists.

"When someone chooses to drive impaired the consequences can be deadly," Patrol Superintendent Col. Paul A. Pride said in a statement. "That's why troopers make OVI enforcement a priority, whether they're patrolling during a holiday weekend or any time of day. Motorists should always pre-plan a sober way home."

Natural Resources: The department's officers and partnering agencies issued 102 citations and 895 warnings last weekend during Operation Dry Water, a nationwide crackdown on impaired boating.

There were three boating-related fatalities in Ohio during the weekend, the ODNR said.

ODNR officers and partners contacted 3,500 boaters on 1,261 vessels for various violations during the crackdown.

The Division of Oil and Gas Resources Management reported that 2,840 permits had been issued for drilling in the Utica shale as of June 30, with 2,370 wells drilled and 1,904 in production.

Burke Blasts Cordray's Medicaid Comments; Soybean Group Sounds Tariff Alarm; Bocchieri Calls For More Local Funding

A lawmaker on Friday accused Democratic gubernatorial candidate Richard Cordray of either lying about or not understanding the issue of Medicaid expansion.

Sen. Dave Burke (R-Marysville), who chairs the Senate Health, Human Services & Medicaid Committee, accused Mr. Cordray of twice in the past week saying that 26,000 children could be impacted if Medicaid expansion were rolled back.

However, Sen. Burke said in a statement that the expansion covers only childless adults.

"Richard Cordray continues to make Medicaid expansion a key part of his campaign for governor, but his statements over the past week prove he does not understand Ohio's Medicaid program. Cordray's comments in the media show he is either unprepared to be governor, or that he is willing to blatantly lie and use fear tactics to scare Ohioans into voting for him," he said.

"Medicaid comprises over 50% of Ohio's annual budget. If Richard Cordray doesn't understand such a key part of the state budget, then Ohioans simply cannot trust him to sit in the governor's office. Richard Cordray is making promises, and this week he's proven to us that that he doesn't know how he would keep them, even if he wanted to."

In response, the campaign of Mr. Cordray cited a 2016 report from the Georgetown University Center for Children and Families that credited Medicaid expansion for 26,000 children gaining insurance coverage from 2013-2015.

Tariff Concerns: The Ohio Soybean Association is sounding the alarm about retaliatory tariffs China has placed on American soybeans. The tariffs kicked in Friday in response to tariffs enacted by the Trump Administration that same day on an array of Chinese goods.

The group in a statement said 61% of all soybean exports go to China, which accounts for about $14 billion annually in sales.

"This doesn't only hurt Ohio farmers, it will hurt the entire Ohio economy," said Allen Armstrong, OSA president and soybean farmer from Clark County. "We continue to believe that solutions can be found that do not involve tariffs and a trade war that will hurt all of rural America."

Local Funding: A new report by the Brookings Institute has led to a renewed call for more local government funding.

The report found that from 2010-2017, three Ohio cities ranked in the top 20 in population decline: Youngstown (19), Toledo (12) and Cleveland (5).

Rep. John Bocchieri (D-Alliance) in a statement called for additional funding for local governments to stem the tide of population loss.

"You can push the responsibility of raising revenue to the lowest layers of government while sending more and more to state government," he said. "As elected officials, we have a duty to work together to get things done - regardless of who is in charge."

Case Remanded After Judge Cites Article In Sentencing; High Court Denies Stay Of Execution; Buckeye Institute Weighs In On Case...

A federal district court judge erred in doubling a man's sentence after citing a Cleveland.com article on opioid overdoses, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled recently.

Marcus Fleming in July 2016 was pulled over by Canton police and found to be carrying nearly 1,000 grams of cocaine.

Based on federal sentencing guidelines, the prosecution recommended five years in prison for Mr. Fleming.

However, at the sentencing hearing Judge John Adams cited the article before handing down a 10-year sentence.

Mr. Fleming argued he was prejudiced by the use of the article because he did not know it would be cited at the sentencing hearing and he was not provided an opportunity to address the issues raised.

The Sixth Circuit agreed, finding the sentence was rendered in a procedurally unreasonable manner.

"The district court's consideration of information about mixed cocaine-opioid overdose deaths was a surprise because, before the sentencing hearing, there was no indication that opioids were relevant to this case, let alone that they would play a prominent role. Fleming was convicted for possession of cocaine, not opioids," Judge John Rogers wrote in the court's decision.

"Nothing in the record suggested that opioids were found in Fleming's car, or that Fleming had ever sold or possessed opioids, or even that any cocaine Fleming sold had ever been mixed with opioids. Of course, opioids have been a topic of grave public concern in recent years, as their devastating and tragic effects have been felt across the country. But it was far from apparent that they were relevant to Fleming's sentence for possession of cocaine."

Judge Rogers was joined by Judge Raymond Kethledge and Judge Damon Keith in his decision.

The case is remanded back to the district court for sentencing.

Stay Denied: The Ohio Supreme Court has declined to stay the execution of a man set to be put to death this month.

In a unanimous ruling the court declined to stay the July 18 execution of Robert Van Hook.

He is on death row after being convicted of the 1985 murder of David Self.

Judicial Deference: The Buckeye Institute has filed an amicus brief in a case that could end judicial deference to executive agencies' interpretations of the law.

"The practice of courts relying on agencies to interpret the law has proven to be dysfunctional, inconsistent with our constitutional system, and has led to the erosion of individual liberties," President and CEO Robert Alt said in a statement. "It is time for the Supreme Court to junk Chevron."

Disciplinary Proceedings: The Board of Professional Conduct announced that 12 cases have been certified for formal disciplinary proceedings.

Portman Sets Sights On Deferred Park Maintenance; Dems Welcome Pruitt's Exit; Ryan Tours Immigrant Facility

U.S. Sen. Rob Portman (R-Terrace Park) is among a bipartisan group of senators aiming to tackle about $12 billion in deferred maintenance within the National Park Service.

He joined with senators Mark Warner (D-VA), Lamar Alexander (R-TN), and Angus King (I-ME) to introduce the Restore Our Parks Act, which has earned support from Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke, the National Parks Conservation Association, the Pew Charitable Trusts' Restore America's Parks Campaign and the Outdoor Industry Association.

"For more than a century, the National Park Service has been inspiring Americans to explore the natural beauty of our country," Sen. Portman said in a statement. "But in order to keep that work going, we need to ensure that they have the right resources to maintain our national parks. This bill will create the Legacy Restoration Fund to provide the National Park Service with funds for deferred maintenance projects."

The legislation would provide more than $100 million in funding for work at parks and historic sites in Ohio. The vast majority of the funding would go toward improvements at two sites: Perry's Victory and International Peace Memorial in Put-in-Bay ($47.7 million) and Cuyahoga Valley National Park in Cuyahoga and Summit counties ($45.8 million).

Resignation: Democratic members of Ohio's congressional delegation had no kind words for U.S. EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt following his resignation Thursday.

"Scott Pruitt used taxpayer dollars to benefit himself while working to gut Lake Erie cleanup and the Renewable Fuel Standard and the Ohio jobs that depend on them," U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown tweeted. "He never should have been confirmed in the first place, and it's past time for him to go."

U.S. Rep. Tim Ryan (D-Niles) issued a brief statement in response to the departure: "It's about time."

U.S. Rep. Joyce Beatty (D-Blacklick) simply tweeted "Byeeeeeee!" with a link to a media report about Mr. Pruitt's resignation.

Immigration: Rep. Ryan and three of his U.S. House colleagues from Michigan on Thursday received a tour of Bethany Christian Services' facility in Grand Rapids and learned about the organization's plans to reunite immigrant children with their families.

Rep. Ryan in a statement called the Trump administration's policy of separating children from parents at the U.S.'s southern border "state sponsored abuse."

"Children are traveling by themselves or with their loved ones to avoid violence and danger in their country, and they fled to the United States to find safety and security. They are doing what any responsible parent would do," he said. "But when they arrive at our border, the Trump Administration turns its back on our values and rips children away from their parents - with zero plan to bring them back together."

Hearing: Sen. Brown and Sen. Portman will conduct a field hearing of a congressional committee charged with solving looming pension problems next week at the Statehouse.

The House and Senate Joint Select Committee on Pensions will meet at 2 p.m. next Friday at in the Finan Hearing Room. The hearing will allow panel members to receive testimony from Ohio workers and retirees who could be affected if Congress fails to take action.

Multiple plans Ohioans participate in, including the Central States Teamsters Pension Plan, the United Mine Workers Pension Plan, the Ironworkers Local 17 Pension Plan, the Ohio Southwest Carpenters Pension Plan and the Bakers and Confectioners Pension Plan "are currently on the "brink of failure," according to a news release from Sen. Portman's office.

The committee, which has 16 members appointed by House and Senate leadership, has been tasked with reporting a bill to resolve the issue by the end of November.

Capitol Scene: Child Caring Group Updates Name

The advocacy group formerly known as the Ohio Association of Child Caring Agencies has renamed itself the Ohio Children's Alliance, it was announced Friday.

The change, the group said, reflects the changing environment for child and family services.

"Our new name is more representative of our mission and the composition of our statewide network of community agencies," said Mark Mecum, the group's CEO. "Over the past five decades, our association has grown to over 70 community agencies that provide behavioral health, foster care, and other child and family services. We've also evolved into an alliance that fosters collaboration and innovation. Our new name symbolizes our commitment to Ohio's children and the agencies that serve them."

The organization was founded in 1973.

Good morning everyone,

Since I started in the House, I've had the Ashbrook Center's pocket Constitution and Declaration perched upon my desk. It's a neat little booklet that also contains Lincoln's Second Inaugural, the Gettysburg Address, and excerpts from some of Thomas Jefferson's letters. I've turned to it many times for inspiration, and occasionally, for work purposes. I carried this same pocket constitution while I was in college, when I was just beginning to understand the depth of meaning contained in our Founding documents.

Now, I am excited to carry this same little booklet back to the Ashbrook Center to embark on a new chapter in my career. With it, I carry back a deeper understanding of the legislative process, and great experiences in politics. It still astounds me that we all have had the opportunity to help make law and improve the lives of 11.5 million people. I'm incredibly grateful for the opportunity to serve the people of Ohio. These experiences will all help me with my new mission of cultivating good civics education in our country through the use of primary source documents.

Better yet, I'll also carry with this little booklet memories and friendships that will last a lifetime. I'll miss the House, but I won't be far away. Feel free to stay in touch. My cell is 419-561-0073 and my personal email is brssman4913@gmail.com

MEMORANDUM

DATE: February 18, 2016
RE: Request for Co-Sponsorship – Paid Parental Leave

We will soon introduce legislation to create the Family and Medical Leave Insurance Program. Beginning in 2020, the program will provide 12 weeks of family and medical leave benefits, which will permit individuals to care for a family member, bond with a new child, or address their own serious health condition.

Out of 178 countries worldwide, the United States is one of three that does not provide paid leave to new mothers. Only two states, California and New Jersey, offer paid leave to men and women who provide care. The federal Family Medical Leave Act provides 12 weeks of leave for family and medical reasons. This time is unpaid and employers with fewer than 50 employees are exempt, which eliminates a large segment of workers. Ohio should lead on the issue of paid leave to grow our economy and allow working people to put family first.

The program will be under the purview of the Department of Job and Family Services. An individual would receive leave insurance benefits for: a health condition which makes him/her unable to perform their job duties; caring for a new child during after birth, adoption, or foster care placement; caring for a child, parent, or spouse who has a serious health condition; or the individual is taking any other leave as authorized by the federal Family and Medical Leave Act. In order to be eligible for program benefits, an individual must file a claim with ODJFS; must have worked at least 680 hours during the base period; premiums have been withheld and remitted for at least one year; and the leave must be for the above-mentioned purposes.

Once established, program benefits will be paid by assessing premiums on employees. Employers will be required to deduct and withhold premiums from employee's wages. However, an employer may opt to pay the contributions on behalf of employees.

An employee who is covered by an employer policy or collective bargaining agreement that provides the employee with greater leave than that provided by the Family and Medical Leave Act may elect not to participate in the Program in accordance with rules adopted by the Director. An employee who elects to opt out of participating in the Program is not liable for any premium or contribution that would otherwise be due under the Program.

Working people in Ohio should not have to worry about losing their job or falling behind financially just to take care of a sick child or relative; address their own serious health condition; or care for and bond with their newborn child. Ohio cities like Dayton and Cincinnati are leading on leave. By allowing working people to put their family first, we can truly make Ohio a better place to live, work, and raise a family.

If you have any questions or would like to co-sponsor this legislation, please contact Dan Maxwell, at 466-1645 or via email at Dan.maxwell@ohiohouse.gov. The deadline to co-sponsor is Monday February 29th at 5:00pm.

Subject: At-Will Employment Is the Rule in Ohio

Hi Justin – I keep hearing that some employers are concerned that an employee's use of marijuana will be protected if a medical marijuana law is passed in Ohio. What no one seems to be mentioning is that Ohio is an "at will" to work state, and an employer can terminate an employee for any reason. I pulled this off the internet. Perhaps, Rep. Schuring will want to have the caucus lawyer look into this. I am not a lawyer – but this looks pretty clear to me.

Please let me know what Rep. Schuring thinks.

At-Will Employment Is the Rule in Ohio

Q: I'm considering leaving my job and moving to accept an offer from an Ohio employer. A friend told me I should ask for an employment agreement that specifies I will not be an employee at will. What does that mean?

A: "Employment at will" means that, unless you agree otherwise with your employer, either you or your employer may terminate the employment relationship at any time for any reason that does not contradict the law. If you do not get an employment agreement for a specific period of time, you will be an "at will" employee and can be terminated at any time. By the same token, as an at-will employee, you are free at any time to leave a job you no longer want in order to take a better position.

Q: What happens if the employer will not agree to employ me for a specific period of time?

A: If you take the job in Ohio as an at-will employee, your employer could lawfully terminate your employment on the day that you arrive. On the other hand, as an at-will employee, you would be free to leave that job at any time to take a better position.

Q: Is Ohio the only "at will" state?

A: No. Almost every state in the United States considers employees to be "at will" unless the employment falls into an exception to the employment-at-will doctrine. The only state where "at will" is not the general rule is Montana, which has a law making it somewhat harder for employees to be terminated.

Q: What are the exceptions?

A: Ohio has five basic exceptions to the employment-at-will doctrine.

1) The employment-at-will doctrine does not apply if an employment contract provides for a specific term of employment or job protection, such as allowing a termination only for just cause.

2) Facts and circumstances may imply a contract, even if the employer does not provide a written employment agreement. Facts and circumstances that may imply a contract include information contained in employee handbooks, oral representations by supervisors of job security in exchange for good performance, and written assurances reflecting company policy. (Note: These conditions can often be difficult for an employee to satisfy, particularly because a simple disclaimer in the employee handbook stating that the handbook is not a contract, or a notice from the employer that the employee can be terminated for any reason, will prevent the employee from claiming there is an implied contract.)

3) Promissory estoppel is another exception to the at-will doctrine. In such a case, an employee reasonably relies (to his or her detriment) on something an employer says or writes, even though it is not a contract. Let's say, for example, that the employer suspends the employee from the job for failing to obtain an expensive license of some kind, but promises to reinstate the employee when the license is obtained. If the employee, relying on the representation that he or she will be reinstated, spends money to obtain the license, and the court finds that the employer should have expected the employee to rely on the promise, then the court could prevent the employer from refusing to reinstate the employee under the "promissory estoppel" theory.

4) A "public policy" exception would prohibit an employer from terminating an employee "at will" if such a termination would violate certain important public policies. For example, if an employee can prove he or she was terminated only for taking time off to serve on a jury, a court may determine that the employee was wrongfully terminated because jury service is an important public function, and allowing employees to be terminated for serving on a jury would endanger that important function.

5) State and federal laws prohibit employment terminations for specific reasons, such as discrimination based on race, sex, disability, or other protected class status, or retaliation for engaging in protected conduct, such as whistleblowing or filing a workers' compensation claim. For example, an employer may not terminate an at-will employee because the employer learns that the employee has a disability.

Q: How can I get a contract for a specific term of employment?

A: Bargain for it. In your case, you might say you will only accept the new job with a minimum employment term (say, a year) or an agreement that you will only be terminated for just cause. Once you quit your job and move to Ohio, however, you will lose your bargaining leverage and probably will not be able to bargain for job security.

Certain employees have contracts that are not at will, including some public school teachers and other public officials who, by law, are entitled to annually renewed employment contracts. Also, union members generally are protected by a collectively bargained agreement preventing the employer from firing them without just cause.

Q: What is "just cause"?

A: "Just cause" does not have an exact legal meaning and depends on the circumstances. Generally speaking, however, it refers to sufficient fault on the part of the employee to justify termination. For example, an employer usually will have just cause to terminate an employee who fails to show up or call off from work for several days. In the case of performance problems, however, just cause usually means that the employee consistently has failed to meet the employer's reasonable expectations despite the employer's warnings and instructions to improve.

Q: What happens if an employee has a contract, but the employer fires her anyway without just cause?

A: The employee could bring suit for damages from a breach of contract claim to recover the earnings he or she lost as a result of being fired without just cause before the end of the contract.

Subject: NEWS UPDATE--Troopers Reach Contract Agreement With State

Troopers Reach Contract Agreement With State

The state and Ohio State Troopers Association on Thursday announced details of a tentative three-year contract agreement supported by more than 90% of the union members who voted in recent days.

The 1,760-member union negotiated a 12.5% raise over three years in annual increments of 5%, 5% and 2.5%, OSTA President Jeremy Mendenhall said. Since the negotiations were delayed, the first year increase will be retroactive to the expiration date of the last contract, which was July 1, 2015.

The pact includes a one-time ratification payment of $750 for members, according to the union and Department of Administrative Services.

OSTA received a higher increase than other union employees, which received 7.5% over three years "in exchange for concessions to the Health and Physical Fitness Program, management discretion in selection, and flexibility in the area of personal leave," the two sides reported in a joint news release.

The groups said language in the contract that enhances management rights and employee accountability, streamlines the disciplinary process and lengthens the retention period for discipline, is "consistent with the changes in the other collective bargaining agreements," according to the release.

Pending Controlling Board ratification, the contract will be effective on Sept. 29.

Subject: Request for Co-Sponsorship – Paid Parental Leave

Importance: High

Ohio House of Representatives

MEMORANDUM

TO: All House Members
FROM: Representative Janine Boyd
DATE: January 9, 2017
RE: Request for Co-Sponsorship – Paid Parental Leave

I will soon reintroduce legislation to create the Family and Medical Leave Insurance Program. Beginning in 2020, the program will provide 12 weeks of family and medical leave benefits, which will permit individuals to care for a family member, bond with a new child, or address their own serious health condition.

Out of 178 countries worldwide, the United States is one of three that does not provide paid leave to new mothers. Only two states, California and New Jersey, offer paid leave to men and women who provide care. The federal Family Medical Leave Act provides 12 weeks of leave for family and medical reasons. This time is unpaid and employers with fewer than 50 employees are exempt, which eliminates a large segment of workers. Ohio should lead on the issue of paid leave to grow our economy and allow working people to put family first.

The program will be under the purview of the Department of Job and Family Services. An individual would receive leave insurance benefits for: a health condition which makes him/her unable to perform their job duties; caring for a new child during after birth, adoption, or foster care placement; caring for a child, parent, or spouse who has a serious health condition; or the individual is taking any other leave as authorized by the federal Family and Medical Leave Act. In order to be eligible for program benefits, an individual must file a claim with ODJFS; must have worked at least 680 hours during the base period; premiums have been withheld and remitted for at least one year; and the leave must be for the above-mentioned purposes.

Once established, program benefits will be paid by assessing premiums on employees. Employers will be required to deduct and withhold premiums from employee's wages. However, an employer may opt to pay the contributions on behalf of employees.

An employee who is covered by an employer policy or collective bargaining agreement that provides the employee with greater leave than that provided by the Family and Medical Leave Act may elect not to participate in the Program in accordance with rules adopted by the Director. An employee who elects to opt out of participating in the Program is not liable for any premium or contribution that would otherwise be due under the Program.

Working people in Ohio should not have to worry about losing their job or falling behind financially just to take care of a sick child or relative; address their own serious health condition; or care for and bond with their newborn child. Ohio cities like Dayton and Cincinnati are leading on leave. By allowing working people to put their family first, we can truly make Ohio a better place to live, work, and raise a family.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

HB 16 ■ ROAD NAMING (Cera, J.) To designate a portion of State Route 43 in Jefferson County as the "Army Corporal Carl H. Bernhart Memorial Highway."
(REPORTED (No testimony); 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

HB 22 ■ ROAD NAMING (Hambley, S.) To designate a portion of State Route 261 in Medina and Summit Counties as the "Sergeant James F. Allen III Memorial Highway." (REPORTED; 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

Asley Rae Yeager submitted written testimony in support. "The significance of having a memorial highway designated in his name would mean so much to me personally, his daughter Natalie, son Tristan, as well as friends, family, and military comrades," she wrote.

"It will also stand as a daily encouragement to continue his legacy through goodwill and advocacy."

HB 9 TRAFFIC SIGNALS (Koehler, K.) To specify that the alternative protocol for proceeding into an intersection with malfunctioning traffic lights due to a failure of a vehicle detector applies only to bicycles. (REPORTED; 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

Sgt. Nick Konves, of the Columbus Police Bicycle Coordination Unit, testified in support, saying he became aware of the bill that passed last session (HB154, 131st General Assembly) after seeing news reports and was concerned that any type of vehicle could treat red lights as stop signs in certain instances. He cited "blind intersections," differences between stop signs and traffic signals at intersections and the potential for crashes at the crossroads.

He said the prior legislation, which allows vehicles to proceed through malfunctioning traffic signals, allows for too much discretion. "This makes enforcement and prosecution very difficult and nearly impossible," he said. "I have testified many times in various court systems during my career and I foresee this causing a big problem for prosecution."

Responding to a question from Rep. Michael Sheehy (D-Oregon), the witness said that under the bill a bicycle could still proceed through an untriggered traffic signal after a "reasonable amount of time."

Patricia Kovacs, of the Ohio Bicycle Federation, said the bill passed last session should stand and allow for all motor vehicles to proceed through malfunctioning traffic signals. At minimum, motorcycles should also be included because they face the same issues as bicycles, she said.

"This law should really apply to any vehicle," she said.

HB 1 DATING PROTECTION ORDERS (Sykes, E., Manning, N.) To authorize the issuance of dating violence protection orders with respect to conduct directed at a petitioner alleging dating violence, to provide access to domestic violence shelters for victims of dating violence, and to require the Attorney General's victim's bill of rights pamphlet to include a notice that a petitioner alleging dating violence has the right to petition for a civil protection order. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor & proponent)

HB 7 MEDICAL PROVIDER IMMUNITY (Cupp, R.) To grant qualified civil immunity to certain medical providers who provide emergency medical services as a result of a disaster; to provide that certain communications made regarding an unanticipated outcome of medical care, the development or implementation of standards under federal laws, and an insurer's reimbursement policies on health care are inadmissible as evidence in a medical claim; to provide that medical bills itemizing charges are inadmissible as evidence and an amount accepted as full payment for medical services is admissible as evidence of the reasonableness of the charges; to specify the manner of sending a notice of intent to file a medical claim and provide a procedure for the discovery of other potential claims within a specified period after the filing of a medical claim; to provide that any loss of a chance of recovery or survival by itself is not an injury, death, or loss for which damages may be recovered; to provide civil immunity to certain medical providers regarding the discharge of a patient with a mental condition that threatens the safety of the patient or others; to require that governmental agencies that receive peer review committee records maintain their confidentiality; and to clarify the definition of "medical claim." (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Rep. Robert Cupp (R-Lima) described his bill as the product of months of talks with the Ohio State Medical Association and the Ohio Hospital Association. The Ohio Association for Justice, however, is "not on board" with all of the bill's provisions, he acknowledged. He said the bill would "fill in some of the gaps" in ten areas of existing medical malpractice tort law.

"An unfavorable medical liability climate can lead to expansive and expensive litigation, expensive and sometimes hard to obtain liability insurance, and a diminished supply of medical professionals to meet the needs of patients," he said. "Although the medical malpractice climate in Ohio has significantly improved in the past decade or so as a result of enactments by the General Assembly, there are several things which can further improve medical tort liability law and practice."

According to Rep. Cupp's overview, the bill would:

- Label communications from health care providers communicating error or fault to the list of inadmissible documentation.
- Reduce the need to sweep into the lawsuit unnecessary defendants.
- Permit a notice of intent to file a medical claim to be served by certified mail rather than in person.
- Abrogate the loss of chance theory of tort liability by restoring the "traditional concept of causation by abolishing the judicially-created loss of less than even chance of recovery theory of liability."
- Prevent insurance reimbursement policies from establishing a legal standard of care for medical tort liability.
- Correct existing language regarding nursing home plans of care by exempting hospitals and other providers from the language.
- Maintain the confidentiality of peer review records but clarify that they may be provided to regulators without losing confidential status.
- Prohibit the introduction of "phantom damages" into evidence.
- Provide limited immunity for certain healthcare providers or hospitals acting in good faith and in concert with professional standards when medically discharging a patient who has a mental health condition that may threaten the safety of the patient or others.
- Establish a different liability standard for medical care in the event of a widespread disaster event resulting in "widespread personal injury (or) loss of life that results from any natural or technological phenomenon or act of a human, or an epidemic."

Lawmakers raised several questions about the bill, including several focused on provisions labeling certain communications inadmissible and prohibiting the introduction of phantom damages into evidence.

Rep. Nicholas Celebrezze (D-Parma), for example, questioned whether it was within legislative purview to modify the rules of evidence. And Rep. Bill Seitz (R-Cincinnati) asked whether the phantom evidence provision might deter patients from seeking health insurance. Rep. Kristin Boggs (D-Columbus) asked who or what would determine whether a disaster qualifies under the bill. Rep. Cupp said that area of the bill could use some extra defining, although his inclination is to allow the jury to decide.

The panel met briefly to accept the committee's rules for the new session and have members introduce themselves.

Chair Rep. Steve Huffman said the panel would not be meeting next week, and would not meet on Wednesday, April 5, the day after Gov. Kasich's State of the State address, which is scheduled to be held in Sandusky.

Finance: Agriculture, Development & Natural Resources Sub.

The panel started its budget review work with testimony from Sarah Creedon, executive director of the Liquor Control Commission. (Redbook)

"The Commission is an adjudicatory and rule-making agency that oversees Ohio's alcohol beverage industry. The agency's mission is to provide fair and impartial hearings to protect the public and the permit holders, and to ensure compliance with Ohio liquor laws and administrative rules," she said. "The agency also adopts and promulgates rules, standards, and requirements regarding alcohol sales in Ohio."

Ms. Creedon said the commission works with the Ohio Investigative Unit, the Attorney General's Office, the Division of Liquor Control, and the Department of Taxation to achieve its mission.

"The Division of Liquor Control is responsible for processing applications and issuing liquor permits. Permit holders can appeal division decisions rejecting liquor permit applications and renewals to the commission. As an adjudicatory body, the commission functions as an administrative court with the same duties and obligations of any court," she explained.

The executive budget provides LCC with $844,553 in Fiscal Year 2018, which is an 4% over estimated FY 2017 spending, and $851,269 in FY 2019, which is an increase of 1% from the prior year. Ms. Creedon said the money for commission operations comes from a portion of liquor permit fee revenue.

"While the commission receives no GRF funding, the commission does contribute to the GRF by depositing all revenue it collects from financial forfeitures issued against permit holders for violations of Ohio's liquor laws and rules," she said. "In fiscal year 2016, the commission collected over $1.2 million in financial fines and forfeitures and deposited those funds into the GRF. In the current fiscal year to date, over $1 million was collected and deposited into the GRF."

Rep. Brigid Kelly (D-Cincinnati) asked about the impact of the growing craft brew industry on the panel. Ms. Creedon said that while permit requests have increased, she hasn't seen a related uptick in cases before the commission.

She similarly told Rep. Michael O'Brien (D-Warren) that she couldn't correlate a caseload increase because of the Investigative Unit's transfer to the Highway Patrol a few years ago. Ms. Creedon told Rep. Kelly that the commission plans updates to its database and other improvements with the additional funds in the budget.

Racing Commission: Executive Director William Crawford briefed the committee on the operations of the commission, which regulates horseracing in the state. It also uses no GRF, and instead is funded through taxes on wagers, licensing fees, other fees and fines, and a small percentage of casino revenue, he said. (Redbook)

"The majority of the Racing Commission's expenditures are for subsidies to the horseracing industry in the form of additions to purses at live horse races as well as supplements to purses for Ohio horses that win races at Ohio tracks and other promotional expenses," he said. "Regulation expenses include administration expenses which also include officials and veterinarians as well as drug-testing expenses, expenses that relate to investigation, licensing and the enforcement of rules."

The commission's budget request is about $32.3 million a year over the upcoming biennium. In addition to the five commission members, RAC currently staffs eight full-time and seven part-time positions, according to the Legislative Service Commission. The agency contracts with two stewards, two judges, and five veterinarians.

Chairman Rep. Andy Thompson (R-Marietta) asked if declining casino and VLT revenue, which makes up a big chunk of the agency's budget, has impacted its finances. Mr. Crawford said it has not done so considerably.

Rep. Kelly asked about efforts to ensure safety for riders and horses.

Mr. Crawford said the inspection of racing surfaces, which the commission oversees, is the main concern in that regard and that stewards watch races to make sure they are run safely. He told Rep. O'Brien that stewards can cancel races when the temperature dips below a minus 10-degree wind chill factor or following consultation with jockeys and drivers.

Responding to the chairman, the witness said the commission spends about $1.6 million a year on its drug testing program and investigating potential cheats is "a major concern of ours."

Racing Chairman Robert Schmitz briefly addressed the committee, explaining that the bulk of Ohio's racing industry is tied to Standardbreds and that with the installment of video lottery terminals at horse racetracks, has seen a resurgence after several years of declines.

A Standardbred breeder himself, Mr. Schmitz allowed that he bred his stock outside of Ohio for many years but now there's better breeding stock and other improvements due in part to increased funding from VLTs.

He said racing's impact to the state's agricultural industry is a "very, very big business."

Sea Grant Program: Christopher Winslow, director of the Ohio Sea Grant College Program, F.T. Stone Laboratory, and the Center for Lake Erie Area Research, testified in support of the program's budget and outlined its various education, research and outreach initiatives. (Testimony)

The program receives just under $300,000 a year in state funding, which is used to leverage federal grants. (ODHE-Agriculture Redbook) The director said the program draws down about $10 from other sources for every dollar of state funding it receives.

"Historically, Ohio Sea Grant has managed 8-10 research projects annually (~$480,000). However, since April of 2015, we have increased that research portfolio dramatically. We currently have 119 projects listed within OSU's Office of Sponsored Program's research database," Mr. Winslow said in prepared testimony.

"The program is currently managing $5 million in funding from the Ohio Department of Higher Education (ODHE; $4 million in two $2 million allocations) and OSU's College of Food and Agricultural Sciences (Field to Faucet Initiative; $1 million) to address Lake Erie harmful algal blooms."

Mr. Winslow said Ohio Sea Grant and Stone Laboratory "are exceptional programs and assets to the entire state."

"We solve environmental problems (more than 50 ongoing research projects), enhance the local economy (i.e., business retention and expansion programming), inform decision-makers, and improve the quality of science education in Ohio," he continued. "I would argue that since we first received funds in 1983, we have annually demonstrated that our line item is not a cost to Ohio, but a wise investment of valuable state funds."

Chairman Thompson lauded the public involvement promoted by the program and asked about invasive species.

The director said invasive mussels are "not going anywhere," and cited gobies as another example of non-native species that have infiltrated the Great Lakes. He said researchers are keeping an eye on four species of Asian carp, as they have made it up the Mississippi River drainage area to within 30 miles south of Lake Michigan.

Responding to questions about algae bloom research, he said the main source of nutrients that cause the problem can be traced to agriculture land management practices but that researchers aren't in the "finger-pointing" business. He said the group taps funds from two endowments to finance educational workshops for farmers on best practices in that regard. Mr. Winslow also told members of the committee that he is working with donors to generate funding for equipment upgrades.

In response to a question from Rep. Scott Lipps (R-Franklin), he said buoys used for water quality research cost $50,000-80,000 apiece.

Finance: State Government & Agency Review Sub.

The subcommittee began its review with the Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors.

(Redbook)

Tim Derickson, the board's director, testified that a significant issue the agency is facing is the increasing problems with pre-need funeral services, in which a person pays in advance for the service. Cash-strapped funeral service providers sometimes use that prepaid money, which is supposed to be saved until the service is needed, to meet their bottom line.

That trend causes an increase in the number of investigations and complaints, Director Derickson said, and the board is asking for more funding to add a staff member in two years to help with those investigations.

"To help solve this problem, I think this board needs a little help from what we're currently staffed at," he said.

He also said he expected legislation to be introduced this session with support from funeral home providers for a fee on pre-need services that would help cover costs of unmet pre-need services.

Rep. Kirk Schuring (R-Canton) suggested that legislation be introduced soon so it could be incorporated into the budget document, to avoid the board having expenses budgeted without the revenue to pay for them.

Chair Rep. Keith Faber (R-Celina) also discussed moving the money the board collects in fines to the General Revenue Fund, rather than returning it to the board, to avoid the appearance of the board fining businesses to meet its budget.

"If we were to make that transfer, you're going to need some additional revenue," Rep. Faber said.

The subcommittee also reviewed the Ohio Commission on Hispanic and Latino Affairs.

(Redbook) Executive Director Lilleana Cavanaugh said the commission's increased budget needs stem mostly from insurance and operating costs.

Asked by Rep. Faber what the commission would do if it did not receive the extra $50,000 asked for in the budget, Ms. Cavanaugh said it would have to move a full-time position, one of three, to part-time.

"What is important is to know that through our commission, we're able to provide these agencies with an understanding of the Latino community, the language, the culture, thus decreasing those gaps in communication and culture," she said.

The panel also heard testimony in support of the commission from others, including Claudia de Leon, president of the Hispanic Chamber of Columbus. Ms. de Leon said the commission serves a vital role in the community.

"The Commission on Latino Affairs is a major bridge into the Hispanic community as well as a valuable resource to the Hispanic community - from creating more awareness of how our government works and the services available to help them achieve their educational or personal goals to alerting us of incoming or ongoing legislation that could have an impact to our increasing Hispanic population in Ohio," she said.

Another board reviewed by the panel was the Sanitarian Registration Board (Redbook), which Executive Secretary Stephanie Youst said registers people who are responsible for testing drinking water, inspecting restaurants and performing other public health tasks.

The board proposed an increase in fees, which Ms. Youst said would help cover the increased costs of a new licensure system, rent, supplies and other items.

Ms. Youst said the board is necessary because it ensures public health departments and others have licensed, trained and qualified staff.

"The reason that you need sanitarian registration is sanitarians are responsible for protecting public health," she said.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Ways & Means

SB 35 TAX CREDIT (Skindell, M.) To remove the income restriction on the earned income tax credit and to make the credit refundable beginning in 2017.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) said the bill is the same as his previous effort to make the Earned Income Tax Credit refundable and remove current credit income restrictions (SB21, 131st General Assembly).

Ohio's current EITC equals about 10% of the federal EITC, he said. For those with adjusted gross incomes exceeding $20,000, the credit is capped at 50% of tax due. The legislation would remove that cap.

Sen. Skindell said reducing that cap and making the credit refundable will "go a long way in reducing Ohio's poverty rate." He added that 26 states have EITCs that are refundable.

"A state refundable EITC is targeted to help low to moderate income working individuals and families," he said. "A refundable state EITC would have a significant impact on the long term economic well-being of our low income wage earners and our local and state economy."

Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) questioned how many Ohioans were able take advantage of the credit last tax year. She asked whether she is correct in observing that the bill would benefit those with lower incomes who would not have much of a tax liability in the first place.

"Absolutely, and that's why we want to make it nonrefundable and remove those restrictions," Sen. Skindell replied, adding that a lower tax burden frees up money for clothing or other essentials for those low-income families.

Responding to further questions, Sen. Skindell said the Legislative Services Commission analysis of his bill last year indicated the total cost of the proposal would be around $180 million. In the eight legislative sessions he's been pushing for the change, he said that number has been fairly stable.

SB 36 AGRICULTURAL LAND (Hite, C.) To require that the computation of the capitalization rate for the purposes of determining CAUV of agricultural land be computed using a method that excludes appreciation and equity buildup and to stipulate that CAUV land used for a conservation practice or enrolled in a federal land retirement or conservation program for at least three years must be valued at the lowest of the values assigned on the basis of soil type. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

SB 9 SALES TAX HOLIDAY (Bacon, K.) To provide for a three-day sales tax "holiday" in August 2017 during which sales of clothing and school supplies are exempt from sales and use taxes. (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Sen. Kevin Bacon (R-Minerva Park) said his bill is the same as one he introduced last year that would institute a one-year sales tax holiday during the first weekend in August. (SB264, 131st General Assembly)

Although the sponsor said he still envisions a bill enacting a permanent annual holiday, he said he opted again for the one-time approach after it helped garner legislative and administrative support last session.

Once again the bill would create a three-day sales tax exemption on clothing items up to $75 and on school supplies costing $20 or less per item.

"Many of you may recall the first two sales tax holidays which were passed during the 131st General Assembly," he told the committee. "These events were highly advertised in every part of the state and very popular with Ohio residents. My office received letters of support from students, businesses, and educators following the first two sales tax holidays."

He again touted a study from the University of Cincinnati that determined the 2015 holiday landed the state $4.7 million in additional revenue. He said the university is once against compiling a study of the 2016 holiday that will be shared with the committee upon completion.

Chairman Sen. John Eklund (R-Chardon) said it would be "extraordinarily helpful" to receive that report by Feb. 21, although Sen. Bacon expressed doubt about that timeline. Sen. Sean O'Brien (D-Hubbard) requested the study include, if possible, a breakdown of the impact on counties bordering Pennsylvania, which has no sales tax on clothing items.

Sen. Sandra Williams (D-Cleveland) questioned why the Kasich administration has yet to endorse the sales tax holiday as an annual event.

Sen. Bacon replied that in his conversations with the administration, the governor's staff is committed to using the most conservative form of budgeting. The administration was supportive of both previous one-off holidays, he said, "and we are hoping they will be again."

Government Oversight & Reform

SB 10 PRIMARY ELECTIONS (LaRose, F.) To expand the circumstances under which a board of elections or the secretary of state is not required to hold a primary election. (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson), said it would eliminate the need for primary elections when only one candidate qualified for the ballot.

"I call this the superfluous primaries bill. This is that bill that is meant to address that rare situation where there is only one candidate on the ballot and we are forced to hold an election," he said.

The bill stems from a problem in which a special election is needed, costing taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars, for a race that has already been decided, he said.

"The fix to this is simple," he said. "We trigger the need for an election on how many candidates are certified for the ballot, not how many candidates file petitions for the ballot."

Sen. Edna Brown (D-Toledo) asked if it would apply if a candidate dropped out, leaving only one remaining.

"Essentially what this comes down to, if there's only one candidate left, then there's no need to hold an election," Sen. LaRose said.

SB 18 DAY DESIGNATION (Thomas, C.) To designate September 12 as "Jesse Owens Day." (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

The bill would designate Sept. 12 as Jesse Owens Day, sponsor Sen. Cecil Thomas (D-Cincinnati) said. He was inspired after seeing the movie "Race" and learning that Jesse Owens was from Ohio.

Mr. Owens, who was born in Alabama, grew up in Cleveland and attended the Ohio State University, is best known for winning a record eight NCAA championships on the track in college and winning four gold medals at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin.

"Jesse Owens is remembered as an ambassador for American ideals, both at home and abroad," Sen. Thomas said. "While his incredible athleticism is impressive on its own accord, his legacy is all the more noteworthy because of the character he showed in the face of bigotry. Recognizing Jesse Owens on his birthday - September 12 - is a fitting tribute for one of Ohio's greatest native sons."

SB 21 ELECTION PROCEDURES (Uecker, J.) To reduce the minimum number of precinct election officials in a precinct in which electronic pollbooks are used and to eliminate the requirement that a board of elections send a notice to a person's residence address when the board cancels the person's voter registration because it received a report of the person's death. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

SB 28 ABORTION (Uecker, J.) Regarding final disposition of fetal remains from surgical abortions. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Education

SB 34 ACADEMIC YEAR (Manning, G.) To generally require public and chartered nonpublic schools to open for instruction after Labor Day. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

SB 8 SCHOOL TECHNOLOGY & SAFETY (Gardner, R., Terhar, L.) To require the Ohio School Facilities Commission to establish a program assisting school districts in purchasing technology and making physical alterations to improve technology infrastructure and school safety and security. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Without discussion, the committee confirmed the governor's appointments of Eric Poklar, Rebecca Vasquez Skillings, Charlotte McGuire and Martha Manchester to the State Board of Education.

Volume #86, Report #31 -- Wednesday, February 15, 2017

House Passes Bills Dealing With Cocaine, Taxes, Gambling; Speaker Talks Collective Bargaining

Legislation to change how cocaine is accounted for in drug convictions passed the House unanimously Wednesday.

The House also advanced bills updating the state's tax code to align with federal changes and allowing Ohio casino employees to gamble at other casinos.

The cocaine bill (HB 4) passed unanimously after House members voted 95-1 to incorporate an emergency clause. That bill is designed to clarify the statute for how penalties for cocaine possession are assessed based on the amount of cocaine after an Ohio Supreme Court ruling interpreting the existing language, sponsor Rep. Robert Cupp (R-Lima) said. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 14, 2017)

The Supreme Court's decision in State v. Gonzales said the state must prove the actual weight of the cocaine included in compounds, excluding filler material, to use the amount for sentencing. Rep. Cupp said it would be costly and time-consuming for the state to invest in the laboratory equipment to prove that for these cases.

"The practical fact of the court's decision was to make every cocaine violation a fifth-degree felony unless the cocaine was pure," he said.

Rep. John Rogers (D-Mentor-on-the-Lake) said the bill, with the emergency clause, is needed now because there is currently no added penalty for trafficking in large amounts of cocaine compared to small amounts.

"As the law now stands, drug dealers and traffickers are incentivized to traffic in large quantities of cocaine," he said.

The House also voted unanimously to pass a bill (HB 11) to update the state's tax code with changes in federal law.

"As a CPA, I am well aware some of the tax laws can be a bit dull and difficult to understand, however this legislation is necessary so we can ensure Ohioans are able to fully benefit from the new federal laws this tax season," sponsor Rep. Gary Scherer (R-Circleville) said in a statement.

The other bill passed by the House (HB 32) would allow casino employees to gamble at other unaffiliated casinos in the state. Sponsor Rep. Bill Seitz (R-Cincinnati) said it simply gave casino employees the same right already given to racino employees.

"The only limitation by this bill is that you cannot be employed by or affiliated with the casino at which you are playing," Rep. Seitz said.

Speaker's Comments: Speaker Cliff Rosenberger (R-Clarksville) told reporters after session that while a number of his caucus members are supportive of recently introduced "right-to-work" legislation (HB 53), it's not a focus for leadership.

"We're always going to have members that want to introduce bills and do things. That's in their prerogative to do," he said. "We'll have conversations with the caucus, but I don't know that we have a game plan going forward."

The speaker said many in the legislature remember what happened with the last attempt at similar legislation (SB5, 129th General Assembly), which was repealed by voters. There might not be broad enough support for it, he said, though the state is facing pressure as more states implement similar policies.

"Ultimately for the state, the right-to-work pathway is one which is probably taken to the ballot," he said.

Critics Take Aim At Several Portions Of Transportation Budget

Detractors of certain aspects of Gov. John Kasich's proposed two-year transportation budget on Wednesday spoke out against tax policy changes in the bill, urged more funding for public transportation and lobbied for increased fees for deputy registrars.

Testifying before the House Finance Committee, Matthew White, general counsel of IGS Energy, and Jason Phillips, policy director for Clean Fuels Ohio, both disagreed with a portion of the budget (HB 26) that would allow for the 28-cent-per-gallon Motor Fuel Tax to be levied on compressed natural gas. (Redbook)

Mr. White told the panel that the proposal would harm the fledgling industry while generating little revenue for the state.

"It would be unwise to now impose a tax on CNG in such an expedited manner without studying how the tax may harm the industry and without looking at the complexities of the tax code to ensure any tax is applied fairly," he said in testimony.

Rep. Alicia Reece (D-Cincinnati) questioned Mr. White on if he would be open to a phased-in approach.

In response, Mr. White said a phased-in tax may be appropriate when the CNG market share grows from its current 1% to 3% or more, but not in the current budget cycle.

"We would support a broader study of CNG, including how to incentivize it and how to make it work best for the state of Ohio," he said.

Rep. Adam Miller (D-Columbus) asked how much the federal alternative fuel tax credit weighs on his opposition to the MFT being imposed on CNG. Mr. White said given the political changes in the nation's capital, he is not hopeful that the federal tax credit will be renewed.

Mr. Phillips told the panel that financial incentives should be paired with the tax if it is imposed.

"Pennsylvania and other states that currently tax CNG pair this tax with a very healthy financial incentive to offset a new tax that would hurt the ROI," he said in testimony. "Pennsylvania has had an incentive program for several years, allocating over $25 million to alternative fueled vehicle projects. It has been so successful that they have renewed the program."

Jeffrey Erb, president of the Ohio Association of Convenience Stores, raised concerns in his testimony over a proposal to change the point at which the MFT is collected. The proposed change would allow for the MFT to be collected at the refinery rack starting in 2018. Currently, the tax is paid at the wholesale level, giving business owners about a month after purchasing the motor fuel to sell it and collect taxes from customers before paying taxes to the state.

The change in the point of collection for the tax could generate as much as $92 million per year in revenue, according to the Legislative Service Commission.

Mr. Erb said the change would negatively impact small businesses.

"I asked myself who would benefit by this change. The only answer I could come up with that made sense was big oil. They will be the ones to hold the excise tax if this change is made. There certainly is no crisis in collecting the excise tax now. The Ohio Business Gateway is very efficient for reporting and collecting the tax," he said.

"I also don't see this as being particularly helpful to the government. I hope the government does not see itself as more important than the honest hard working businessmen that produce goods and services that actually allow the government to function."

Rep. Rob McColley (R-Napoleon), the bill's sponsor, said in a recent interview that amendments are likely to address both of those issues. He also said a potential change allowing deputy registrar fees to increase could be in the works. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 13, 2017)

Aldo Filippelli, president of the Ohio Deputy Registrars' Association, said in his testimony that a fee change is warranted given the current $3.50 level was set in 2004.

He requested the fee be boosted by $2.50 with additional increases of 50 cents in 2020 and 2021.

Rep. Robert Sprague (R-Findlay) questioned if it would be more appropriate to phase in such an increase over time.

Mr. Filippelli said that may have worked six or seven years ago, but at this point he is losing employees because of the salaries he is able to pay.

Joe Bowsher, a deputy registrar for the past two decades, said that since the last fee increase, operating costs have increased significantly.

"As an employer, I find that the wages that I pay are below other employers in my area including Wal-Mart, White Castle and most non-skilled positions. As a small business owner, it frustrates me that my employees are paid $10 per hour with little or no benefits, and the state employees in the same job are earning $6 more each hour plus benefits," he said in testimony. "For me to raise wages for my staff to the same amount as state employees would cost me over $120,000 per year, not including taxes and benefits."

Rep. Dan Ramos (D-Lorain) questioned Mr. Bowsher on the number of his employees that receive public assistance. "The state of Ohio is not saving any money if your employees are on public benefits," he said.

Mr. Bowsher said that at least one of his 13 employees receives public assistance.

Several proponents of public transportation also urged lawmakers to make additional investments in the area.

Jason Warner, manager of government affairs at the Greater Ohio Policy Center, applauded a proposal to use federal money to increase funding for public transportation by $10 million for a total of $33 million. However, he said the state could do more and suggested that an additional $17 million in federal funds be flexed for public transportation.

"Setting aside a total of $50 million in FHWA funding to public transit will result in 7.5 fewer miles of highway expansion, or 24 miles of highway repaired per year. For perspective, ODOT paved 5,564 lane miles in 2015," he said in testimony.

"Allocating $50 million per year of FHWA fund to transit-related capital investments will have negligible impact on Ohio's crucial highway maintenance and construction programs, while significantly improving safety, performance, and use of Ohio's public transportation systems."

Asked about the impact that public transportation can have on the tourism industry in a city, Mr. Warner used the example of Cleveland, which hosted the 2016 Republican National Convention, and Columbus, which lost out to Philadelphia for the Democratic National Convention. Public transportation played a major role in that, he said.

"There was no other method for them to get down to where the main convention site was going to be," he said of Columbus and the lack of transportation options from John Glenn International Airport.

Nathan Alley, transportation policy coordinator for the Ohio Chapter of the Sierra Club, echoed many of those sentiments in his testimony. He told the panel that for every $1 invested in public transit, it generates $6 in economic activity.

"We appreciate the allocation of additional flex funding to transit in this proposed budget, but even with that allocation, it is our understanding that transit would still be left with a $20 million deficit because of anticipated changes to our state sales tax structure," he said.

"Please do all that you can in this budget cycle to ensure that we achieve economic development, increase employment opportunities, reduce urban sprawl and congestion, and create more livable communities for all Ohioans."

Akshai Singh of Ohio for Transportation Equity told the panel that the state needs to invest $192.4 million in capital and $96.7 million in operating funds just to meet existing demand for public transportation services.

"Ohio needs a 21st century transportation system, made up not only of roads and highways, but also a complete network of affordable, accessible, and sustainable transportation options, including public transit, passenger and freight rail, electric buses and vehicles, and walk-able, bike-able streets. We need at least $300 million a year - to address the cost of backlogged capital needs, and start to build a system of transit alternatives for the future," he said in testimony.

Katie Frederick, executive director of the American Council of the Blind of Ohio, asked lawmakers to increase funding for public transportation from its current level of 1% to 10%.

The Cincinnati chamber applauded the $10 million increase in funding for public transportation, saying it will allow the Southwest Ohio Regional Transit Authority to replace aging and outdated vehicles.

"At the beginning of this year, SORTA had 63 buses past their 12- year useful life," the group wrote. "Every year beyond this threshold means increased operating and maintenance costs. A 15- year- old bus costs 133% more to maintain than a 10- year- old bus. As of January, Metro had 40 buses that are 15 years old or older, resulting in more than $500,000 in additional annual operating expense. This additional $10M can help unlock federal resources to more rapidly replace the outdated fleet that currently transports people throughout our region."

The group also said that it would be supportive of an amendment to increase funding to Transportation Improvement District across the state. It also noted its support for increased investment in transportation technology.

"As you review programs to pilot innovations in transportation, we look forward to working with you to identify opportunities in southwest Ohio to deploy new technology and bring our state to the fore of innovation in transportation," it wrote.

Also providing testimony was Shane Lieurance, a deputy registrar, and the Cincinnati USA Regional Chamber, the latter in written form.

Senate Committee Debates Bill On Poll Workers, Death Notifications By Election Boards

A Senate panel Wednesday questioned a bill that would reduce the minimum number of election officials needed at certain precincts and change requirements for boards of elections to notify households when deceased individuals are removed from voter rolls.

Members of the Senate Government Oversight and Reform Committee said they wanted to ensure polling places have proper supervision and that people know if they are mistakenly removed from voter rolls.

The bill (SB 21) would grant permissive authority for county boards of elections to reduce the minimum number of election officials from four to two in multi-precinct locations that use electronic poll books, sponsor Sen. Joe Uecker (R-Loveland) said.

"Electronic poll books are revolutionizing voting in precincts across Ohio," he said. "These digital tablets are currently utilized by fifty-five counties. Their use will continue to increase as more counties take advantage of enacted state funds to assist in the cost. Electronic poll books eliminate reliance on traditional paper poll books creating a better and more efficient experience for voters and poll workers."

That authority is permissive, meaning boards of elections would have the right to do so but would not be required, he said.

Sen. Edna Brown (D-Toledo) said she was worried the county board would be pressured to cut costs even if they didn't think it was the best course of action.

"My concern is that county commissioners might pressure boards of elections to make these reductions and then perhaps cause other problems," she said.

Sen. Uecker said the bill would help county boards in areas where one party is dominant and they have trouble finding enough election officials of the other party.

"I think it makes a more proper as well as a more efficient election process," he said.

Sen. Brown suggested the bill require it to be a bipartisan decision by the board of elections to reduce the number of election officials required, and the sponsor said he'd be open to exploring possible amendments.

Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson) said he was worried that having fewer election officials could mean there would be times when only officials from one party were working.

"When there's only two, my worry would be that during the normal ebb and flow of the day as people take a lunch break, a bathroom break, that you have bipartisan oversight," he said.

The bill would also remove a requirement that a board of election send notice to a person's address when the board cancels a voter registration because it received a report of his or her death. Families have complained to boards of elections, Sen. Uecker said, about the emotional toll of receiving such notices.

Sen. LaRose said he was concerned that removing the requirement could lead to voters accidentally being removed from the rolls and not finding out until they go to vote. He said that recently happened to a Legislative Service Commission staffer.

"The idea was that just like any other change in voting status, there would be a notification sent to the household," he said.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) said stopping the notifications could lead to some people being unable to vote. That outweighs the concerns of families who are upset by receiving the notification, he said.

"Causing cancellation is the greater harm," he said.

Sen. Brown said she would like to hear more from county boards of elections about how they receive death notifications.

Sen. Uecker said he would be open to whatever the committee decides to do with the provision, but asked that members keep an open mind and hear testimony from local election officials.

Dating Protection Order Bill Eyed For Quick Committee Approval

A priority House bill to permit domestic partners to obtain civil protection orders appears poised for quick committee passage, according to the committee's chairman.

The measure (HB 154) would close a loophole that sponsor Rep. Emilia Sykes (D-Akron) said "leaves thousands of Ohioans without recourse in the event of dating violence."

After a first hearing Wednesday featuring emotional testimony from domestic violence survivors and advocates, House Civil Justice Committee Chairman Rep. Jim Butler (R-Oakwood) said the bill should move quickly.

"We'll probably have it for a possible vote next week," he said.

That's good news for Rep. Sykes and other advocates who were disheartened when the bill which had been on the verge of passing fizzled out during the lame duck session when the Senate declined to take a concurrence vote.

In that case, the language from Rep. Sykes and former Rep. Christie Kuhns was amended into a separate bill on the House floor during the final night of session. The Senate then opted not to move the bill, saying the amendment was too "complicated" to pass at the zero hour. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, December 9, 2016)

Now the bill is back with the support of Republican House leadership and with Rep. Nathan Manning (R-N. Ridgeville) stepping in as lead co-sponsor in place of former Rep. Kuhns.

In her testimony, Rep. Sykes said abuse victims who don't meet the statutory definition of domestic violence have too little recourse to protect themselves and their children.

"House Bill 1 is necessary because Ohio currently defines domestic violence as violent acts occurring between spouses, family members, those cohabiting, living as spouses, or individuals who share a child in common," Rep. Sykes said. "People in ongoing, substantial, intimate, and dating relationships are not included."

Rep. Manning emphasized the bill would not create an additional class of protection order. Rather, it would fold domestic partners into those eligible to apply for existing orders.

"Due to the risk of ongoing violence in these situations, it is important that all victims of abuse have resources to protect themselves," Rep. Manning said. "Many people argue that a piece of paper is not going to protect someone from harm, but studies have shown that violence stops completely or is significantly reduced when a protection order is in place."

Others testifying in support included representatives from the Summit County Victim Assistance Program, Northeast Ohio Medical University and its police department, and Cleveland Clinic Akron General along with a Summit County Juvenile Court judge.

But perhaps the most powerful testimony came from a pair of domestic violence survivors who described in detail their experience.

Victoria Morgan described having her own protection order request rejected only to see her attacker later force his way into her home and kick her twice down a staircase.

"A lot of times, people only think about the physical signs of abuse," she said. "But the emotional is so much worse. Going through counseling, putting my children through counseling. ... I urge you to pass this bill. It's needed."

Liv Out Loud Founder and CEO Diona Clark recounted her experience in which she ended a relationship, and then her ex-boyfriend arrived at her new home with a gun, trapping her inside.

"After about an hour, he finally let up from the door and I went to reach for the doorknob and he shot me twice at point blank range, once in the chest and once in the wrist," she said.

"My life was spared, but another life could be lost due to lack of proper protection and services to turn to," she continued. "HB 1 can provide adequate help for individuals in need. I am determined to fight for individuals who are victimized; therefore I am determined to fight for HB 1."

Opponents Of 'Pastor Protection Act' Warn Of LGBT Discrimination, But Speaker Expresses Support

Speaker Cliff Rosenberger indicated support Wednesday for a controversial bill on same-sex marriage, which a couple hours later was the target of intense criticism from several clergy members and other opponents.

Similar legislation (HB286, 131st General Assembly) was introduced in the last legislative session but never cleared committee.

However, Speaker Rosenberger (R-Clarksville) said after session the bill (HB 36) is a priority for many House Republicans, and that it would reaffirm protections already enshrined in the Ohio Constitution.

"We have a lot of people in the caucus interested to see something happen with this," he told reporters.

The speaker said his caucus is going to talk more about the bill next week.

"The state constitution already provides for a lot of protections and I think what we'll be doing is passing a bill that just reaffirms that," he said.

Prior to Wednesday's committee testimony, which focused on opponents, Rep. Nino Vitale (R-Urbana) amended the bill with language he said would clarify that it does not invalidate other rights of clergy members.

Afterward, a Democratic lawmaker, nearly a dozen pastors and others denounced the controversial measure, which would codify that no licensed minister or religious organization is required to perform or host a marriage ceremony that does not conform to their religious beliefs.

Delivering testimony to the panel, Rep. Nickie Antonio said the so-called Pastor Protection Act is unnecessary, offensive to members of Ohio's LGBT community and has the potential to damage the state economically.

The Lakewood Democrat said in testimony that both federal and state law provide religious freedom protections that prevent ministers and religious institutions from being forced to take part in wedding ceremonies with which they disagree. She likened the legislation to a controversial North Carolina law that prevented local governments from implementing anti-discrimination laws and forced transgendered individuals to use the restroom of their birth gender.

"If we codify discrimination in Ohio through this bill, we could open the floodgates to confusion and the public's overall disgust with discriminatory legislation," she said. "We need look no further than North Carolina to know that bills that would codify discrimination, don't sell. In North Carolina, PayPal cancelled 400 jobs, Bruce Springsteen canceled his concert, the NBA pulled the All-Star Game, and the NCAA moved its championship games out of state, costing millions, if not billions in lost revenue and payroll."

Rep. Antonio instead suggested that lawmakers move legislation that would ban LGBT discrimination in employment and housing.

"No matter how this debate goes forward I believe it is important for us to remember that we may disagree and discern another person or group to be wrong-but when that discernment causes us to value another person or group less, then we've crossed the line into judgment, condemnation, and exclusion," she said. "I am hopeful we will not cross that line. I respect the members of the clergy who have concerns my hope is that we will experience mutual respect for the dignity and worth of all couples including same sex couples."

Rep. Janine Boyd (D-Cleveland Hts.) asked Rep. Antonio, the first openly gay member of the Ohio legislature, if she and her married partner considered having their wedding ceremony in a place of worship that is not open to non-traditional marriage.

"We went to the place that we knew would embrace us, that would celebrate us," Rep. Antonio replied.

Rep. Michael Sheehy (D-Oregon) asked if she is aware of any lawsuits filed due to a member of the clergy's failure to solemnize a marriage. Rep. Antonio said she is not aware of any such litigation. Even so, she said the bill would not prevent such a lawsuit from being filed.

"With or without this law, anyone in Ohio has the ability to file a lawsuit if they feel they have been wronged," she said.

Rev. Virginia Lohmann Bauman, senior pastor of St. John's United Church of Christ in Columbus, called the legislation "a thinly veiled attempt to legitimize bigotry" and drew a comparison with the U.S. Supreme Court case of Loving v. Virginia, in which the high court struck down laws banning interracial marriage.

"And yet for decades after that case was decided, and in fact, even today, racist pastors in their own churches refuse to marry, with impunity, inter-racial couples they deem unfit to be married in their church," she said in her testimony. "And that right to officiate, or not, in the pastor's own house of worship, is constitutionally protected by our federal and state constitutions. Interestingly, at no time after the Loving decision did the Ohio legislature find it necessary to 'protect' pastors from being 'forced' to marry inter-racial couples outside of that pastor's faith beliefs."

Rep. Niraj Antani (R-Miamisburg) took issue with the characterization that the legislation is an attempt to "legitimize bigotry" and questioned Ms. Lohmann Bauman on how she could be so certain that there is no need for the measure.

"There is no precedent for this. How can you say this is redundant?" he asked.

Ms. Lohmann Bauman responded by saying that it is not the job of the legislature to legislate "hypothetical fears" and said that U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy in the Obgerfell decision legalizing same-sex marriage made clear that it would not interfere with religious protections provided by the First Amendment.

Rep. Ron Hood (R-Ashville) questioned whether Ms. Lohmann Bauman was characterizing those members of the clergy who support the measure as bigots. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 8, 2017)

"I do believe they are asking the legislature to do something inappropriate," she said, adding that the question would be best answered by each of the members of the clergy supporting the legislation.

Rep. Stephanie Howse (D-Cleveland) asked Ms. Lohmann Bauman if she is aware of any lawsuits filed against a member of the clergy that has refused to conduct a marriage ceremony for any reason.

"There are none that I'm aware of," she said.

Ms. Lohmann Bauman was among 11 members of the clergy that submitted testimony in opposition to the bill.

Rev. Joseph M. Cherry of the Unitarian Universalist Society of Cleveland raised the specter that the legislation could pave the way to allow civil servants to discriminate against members of the LGBT community.

"Civil servants must fulfill the law or face the consequences," he said in his testimony. "They are not subject to exception based upon their faith, religion or tradition. If they do not wish to perform all of the duties that their civil position requires, they are free to seek other employment. No one is conscripted into civil service."

Rev. J. Bennett Guess of the United Church of Christ, who said he refused to sign marriage licenses for the 11-year period in which the ban against same-sex marriage was enshrined in the state constitution, called the bill "a solution in search of a non-existent problem."

"'Bogus' is the only word I have for it," he said in prepared testimony. "While purportedly designed to protect clergy and places of worship from performing or hosting marriages against their wishes, it is unnecessary and a complete waste of taxpayers' time and money."

Opposition testimony, however, was not confined to members of the cloth and Rep. Antonio. Alana Jochum of Equality Ohio told the panel that the legislation gives wide latitude to undefined "religious societies."

"Religious entities play many roles in our state. Catholic Charities and Salvation Army, for example, provide a host of social services, crisis intervention, temporary housing, after school programs, and even food assistance. Many receive state and federal funding to do so, and are obligated to serve everybody equally in these programs," she said in prepared testimony. "Religious entities, therefore, are not always simply 'houses of worship;' they also include entities that engage in commerce -- by operating conference centers, reception halls, engaging in equipment rental, and much more."

Lisa Wurm, policy manager for the ACLU of Ohio, said her organization would defend the freedom of religion if clergy members were required to conduct marriages that violate their religious tenets.

"At the same time, we will not allow the guise of religious freedom to harm others," she said in prepared testimony. "This is what it means when religious liberty turns from acting as a shield to a sword. We've rejected the sword approach during the civil rights era, when religion was used as a reason to refuse integration in businesses and in our public areas. We need to continue to reject it now."

Senate Resumes Debate Over Disposal Of Fetal Remains

Legislation dealing with the disposition of fetal remains from abortions had its first hearing in a Senate committee Wednesday, with some members voicing concerns that it would face legal challenges.

The bill (SB 28) is similar to one introduced last session (SB254, 131st General Assembly) as part of a flurry of legislation that followed an investigation by Attorney General Mike DeWine into the disposal of remains.

The measure's sponsor, Sen. Joe Uecker (R-Loveland), told the Senate Government Oversight and Reform Committee the bill is designed to ensure the proper disposal of remains.

"Last year it was brought to my attention that the Ohio Revised Code does not contain procedures regarding the disposal of aborted infant remains," he said. "In fact, most states lack such policies."

The bill declares that an abortion facility can only dispose of aborted remains through cremation or interment and grants the mother the right to determine the final disposition of remains, Sen. Uecker said. It would also require the Department of Health to maintain records of the woman's decision and the final disposition.

Sen. Kenny Yuko (D-Richmond Hts.), the ranking Democrat on the panel, said similar legislation in Indiana and Texas has been challenged and overturned in courts, and he was worried it was setting the state up for expensive legal issues.

He also said there didn't appear to be any real reason for the bill, as investigations have not turned up a pattern of problems with the disposal of remains.

"I know as legislators, we get contacted by people asking us to look at possible legislation and here's the reason why," he said. "I just can't think of the reason why in this case."

Sen. Uecker said the state should take steps to ensure fetal remains are respected.

"I believe that the right to life is the very first right we have, possibly the most important right we have," he said. "I believe that the way society shows this is crucial."

He also said he believed there were differences between his bill and the legislation in Texas and Indiana, and that it would be more likely to withstand judicial scrutiny.

Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson) asked if the bill would apply to all fetal remains or just those from surgical abortions. The sponsor said it would only apply to the remains from surgical abortions.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) asked if it was appropriate for the state to single out one kind of fetal remains.

"What state interest is being served by the unequal treatment of just surgical fetuses versus any other fetal death?" he asked.

Chairman Sen. Bill Coley (R-Liberty Twp.) said he and the committee will take a serious look at vetting all of the legal implications of the bill with the hopes of avoiding burdening the state with lawsuits.

Senate Advances Measure Creating Perry County Municipal Court

Once again, the Senate unanimously passed legislation to establish a county municipal court in Perry County.

The latest 33-0 vote, during a session Wednesday, marked the third time the chamber has approved the bill. In the most recent instance, the bill cleared the Senate, only to be held up in a House committee during the 2016 lame duck session. (SB 299, 131st General Assembly)

"This will be the third time this body has voted on this and it's my hope the House can act expeditiously on it and we can secure timely order of justice for the citizens of Perry County," sponsor Sen. Jay Hottinger (R-Newark) told colleagues on the Senate floor.

In addition to creating the court, the bill (SB 25) authorizes one full-time judgeship and provides for the nomination of that judge by petition. Upon its effect, the bill would abolish the existing Perry County Court and designate the county's clerk of courts as the clerk of the newly formed court.

Supporters - including the Ohio Supreme Court - say the court is needed after New Lexington eliminated its mayor's court in 2013, a cost-saving move that increased the caseload of other county courts from 1,800 cases a year to between 5,000-6,000 cases a year.

The bill contains an emergency clause, which was accepted by a 33-0 vote. That provision was necessitated, Sen. Hottinger said, by a committee amendment requested by the Ohio Supreme Court.

Added earlier this week, the amendment allows members of the Criminal Justice Recodification Committee to continue serving after they're no longer officeholders.

The Senate also unanimously passed a resolution (SCR 4) that permits the Senate President and House Speaker to appoint individuals to write arguments for and against proposed constitutional amendments.

Similar provisions have been passed unanimously each session since 1974, said sponsor Sen. Bob Peterson (R-Sabina).

Obhof Gaggle: Speaking to reporters after session, Senate President Larry Obhof (R-Medina) said he anticipates the chamber will act quickly on approving the governor's request for a joint session April 4 in Sandusky for the State of the State address. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 13, 2017)

Formal resolutions to convene the joint session had not been introduced by lawmakers in either chamber as of Wednesday afternoon.

"I think it's a great opportunity to showcase some of our natural resources, particularly the lake," he said. "I've spoken with (Sen. Randy) Gardner several times about possible activities up there and I think this will give us a chance to focus on some of the water quality efforts we've done over the last few years and maybe some that are coming up and to highlight Ohio's tremendous tourism industry."

He said the Senate could hold two or three committee meetings on site in Sandusky, although no firm plans have been made.

Asked about the recent introduction of a House right-to-work bill (HB 53), Sen. Obhof said the issue isn't a priority for Senate leadership.

"As with any piece of legislation, we'll give thoughtful consideration to anything that comes to our chamber," he said. "I would say you'd have to speak to the individual caucus members but we have done significant reforms in recent years.

"I'm not aware of anybody in the Senate that plans to introduce a bill about that subject but there are 33 members and I haven't called the other 32 to see where everybody is on what bills everyone's introducing. I don't micromanage like that," he continued.

Bill To Start School After Labor Day Will Get Thorough Review, Lehner Says

It is unlikely that watchers of a bill that would move the first day of school to after Labor Day will know soon whether it has the Senate Education Committee's support.

Chairwoman Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) said she's planning for long discussions on the bill (SB 34) as well as another to create a funding program for school technology infrastructure upgrades (SB 8).

"I think both of the ones that were in (committee) today are going to require a fair amount of hearings," she said.

The panel will also extensively review anticipated legislation on end-of-course exams and student suspensions in addition to a recently referred bill (SB 39) addressing questions about e-school attendance tracking, she said.

The school start date measure, sponsored by Sen. Gayle Manning (R-N. Ridgeville), has generated considerable buzz among school districts and parents since it was first unveiled late in the last General Assembly.

Waiting to open schools until after Labor Day would alleviate issues caused by a lack of air conditioning or functioning windows in schools when it is hot, as well as give families more time to vacation, Sen. Manning said.

"This additional vacation time for families also helps to promote economic activity," she said. "This can create and maintain jobs, providing additional local tax revenues that support our schools and local public safety resources."

Sen. Manning stressed that the bill shouldn't interfere with local control because it has an opt-out provision allowing school boards to continue setting the start dates of their choosing. Boards would be required to hold a public hearing before voting to opt out.

The change from calculating the school year in days to hours would also make it possible for districts to maintain their current end dates while pushing back the start date, she added.

While tourism industry leaders are expected to once again testify in support of the measure that they say will benefit the state's economy, it's likely many school districts won't be in favor.

Sen. Lehner said after the meeting that she's "open to" starting school in September because other states already require it without issue. However, she acknowledged there could be logistical problems and that public hearings on the issue have the potential to cause rifts between schools and parents.

"At what point does it become an opt out versus a, 'Hell no we won't go,'" she questioned.

Regardless of concerns and the inability of the proposal to pass through previous legislatures, the chairwoman at the end of Wednesday's discussion promised Sen. Manning that the bill will continue to be seriously considered.

The committee also heard sponsor testimony on a bill to allow schools that are low on the School Facilities Commission's priority funding list to receive dollars now for technology and safety upgrades. A companion measure (HB 37th) started its journey through the House Education and Career Readiness Committee on Tuesday. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 14, 2017)

Joint sponsor Sen. Randy Gardner (R-Bowling Green) said he'll be pushing to move the bill through the upper chamber before spring break.

"This was a recommendation in Senate Bill 3 (in the 130th General Assembly), but this amps this issue up another notch to do something that we believe can be very meaningful for schools and school children around the state," he said of the bill that would require the School Facilities Commission to create a technology infrastructure funding program as opposed to current law that permits it.

Sen. Gardner told committee members that the two-page bill would give OSFC the ability to structure the program in the way it deems best after receiving input from stakeholders.

Despite his optimism that the bill will be reported out of committee in the next few weeks, Sen. Lehner said it will likely require multiple hearings and stakeholder meetings to continue "ironing out some of the questions."

She suggested that the sponsors consider whether charter schools would be eligible for the funding and Sen. Vernon Sykes (D-Akron) raised questions about if and how district priority would be determined.

Victim's Rights Group Announces Campaign Kickoff

Law enforcement officials and advocates on Wednesday announced the official kickoff of a statewide campaign to enshrine new requirements for the treatment of crime victims into the Ohio Constitution.

Supporters of the so-called Marsy's Law, named after a murder victim who died in 1983 and patterned after similar laws in other states, appeared at a Statehouse news conference and urged support for the changes, which if the coalition is successful would appear on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The Marsy's Law for Ohio amendment would mandate that crime victims: Receive notification of all legal proceedings; are provided the opportunity to be heard during the various steps of the process, such as parole hearings; are allowed to give input on plea deals; and are provided restitution resulting from the financial impact of the crime.

"By placing guarantees into the Ohio Constitution that a victim's rights will be protected, Marsy's Law for Ohio will be another important tool for prosecutors in the battle to help crime victims," longtime Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien said in a statement.

While the state's constitution already includes some protections for crime victims, supporters of the amendment say they don't go far enough.

"The rights of crime victims are too important to be allowed to fall through the cracks in the criminal justice system," Franklin County Sheriff Dallas Baldwin said. "I have long believed that the rights of crime victims should be respected just as much as the rights of the accused. Marsy's Law for Ohio is a much-needed change to Ohio's constitution."

Also appearing at Wednesday's event were representatives of crime victim advocacy groups and survivors of violent crimes.

"My rights as a victim in the domestic violence case against my husband were routinely violated and no one in the system seemed to care," crime victim Danielle Morlan said. "Marsy's Law for Ohio will change that and give crime victims the ability to protect and enforce their rights."

The campaign committee was cleared to begin collecting signatures last week when the Ohio Ballot Board agreed the proposal constituted a single issue. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 8, 2017)

Supporters have until July 5 to gather 305,591 valid signatures and meet other requirements to qualify for the fall ballot.

Lawmaker: CAUV Formula A 'Major Butt-Kicker' For Farmers

Sen. Cliff Hite (R-Findlay) on Wednesday renewed his effort to overhaul the Current Agricultural Use Value tax formula in testimony before the Senate Ways & Means Committee.

The proposal he outlined (SB 36) is identical to his prior bill on the subject (SB246, 131st General Assembly), he said. But he's hoping this year's bill will fare better than the last, which received six hearings in the Senate but failed to advance beyond committee.

"I understand the angst. I'm sure the Department of Taxation is going to pull their hair out," Sen. Hite said. "We've been thinking about this and talking about this for a long time. It's time to do something. It's time to give relief to these farmers."

Farmer groups for their part have already vowed to "carry the CAUV fairness fight into 2017." They say the formula that has worked fine for decades has become skewed and is driving up their tax burdens, threatening to force them out of the profession. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, December 20, 2016)

Opponents, including statewide school groups, have previously opposed the change out of concerns it will negatively impact school funding.

Predicting that those concerns will return before the committee in testimony this session, Sen. Hite urged lawmakers to put themselves in the position of farmers.

"If any of you were doing your taxes this time of year and you discovered your taxes were going to go up 300% you would freak out, especially if you're on a fixed income, especially if you're a brand new, let's say, farmer trying to get started," he said."

The bill would prohibit the use of certain nonagricultural factors in the valuation of farmland, which the sponsor said would improve the accuracy of the formula.

"Including these assumptions has no bearing upon the land's capability to produce agricultural income, which is the sole purpose of the CAUV formula," he said. "These factors arbitrarily inflate the value of farmland based on market considerations and do not in any way account for how much income is achieved."

The bill would also remove disincentives to engage in conservation practices, which he said undermines the formula's original intent to preserve land.

"If I don't have an incentive to keep my woodlands, I'm going to plow them down and make more money," Sen. Hite said. Although that is currently happening, he said, it's not yet occurring on a large scale.

He acknowledged that the taxation percentage for some farmers is currently going down, but asked lawmakers to keep that in perspective.

"To me going from (a) 350% (increase) to 310% is going down but, in layman Coach Hite language, it's a major butt-kicker anyway," he said. "It's not even apples and oranges. It's like apples and squirrels."

In response to questions, Sen. Hite committed to providing specific numbers on several aspects of the issue to senators moving forward. Among the unanswered questions was how the CAUV applies to urban farmers.

Sen. Hite did express support for an idea from Sen. Louis Terhar (R-Cincinnati) to implement a "collar" on the formula so that the taxes owed in any one year could not rise above or drop below specific levels.

"But there's a caveat," Sen. Hite replied. "The formula from the '70s has the capacity to also go down and so if you change that formula the chances of going way down would be eliminated with the (collar). I don't know what is better."

Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) requested more detail on woodland preservation regarding the CAUV. Sen. Hite replied that the woodland in question is typically small and serves as a wind or snow buffer. Under the current formula, however, farmers stand to gain money from clearing that land to free up new farmland, he said.

Sen. Bob Hackett (R-London) agreed that something must be done. He criticized a time lag present in the formula in which farms going through tough times are still paying taxes for healthy years from 2012 and 2013. Meanwhile, he said, the industry is struggling with historically low interest rates and simultaneously high crop prices.

"We just have to update the rules and make them fit the times," Sen. Hackett said.

Sen. Bob Peterson (R-Sabina) agreed the historically low capitalization rates have "skewed the formula" and forced land values to be higher than they should be.

Predicting a robust discussion on the issue as the bill moves forward, Sen. Hite requested committee members keep in mind the importance agriculture plays in Ohio's economy. Potential farmers are being deterred from entering the profession, he said.

"We can't allow that to happen when it's our number one industry in the state of Ohio," he said. "This is a change to make sure we preserve that."

Insurers, Regulators Eyeing DC For Health Policy Changes

State insurance regulators and the health insurance industry are closely monitoring the federal debate over the future of the Affordable Care Act to determine the impact that changes could have on Ohio consumers and the marketplace, stakeholders told a House panel on Wednesday.

Jillian Froment, deputy director of the Ohio Department of Insurance, and Miranda Motter, president and CEO of the Ohio Association of Health Plans, both said changes could have a far-reaching impact on the Ohio market.

Ms. Froment told the House Insurance Committee that the full impact of any federal changes won't be known until a final product is in place.

She said, however, that insurers will be filing their 2018 rates and policies within the next two months. "We are incredibly concerned about what this looks like for Ohio," she said.

Ms. Froment noted that those filings will be based on current law. If there are changes, ODI will have to be flexible to accommodate for adjustments.

"At this point, they're looking for clarity," she said of insurers. "And that's what the department's looking for."

Ms. Motter said federal changes could either bring stability or volatility to insurance markets.

The federal law, she said, did little to address health care costs, and said efforts should be made to identify key cost drivers - including medical service rates and prescription costs. Further, she said OAHP wants to increase transparency so Ohioans have more information about the cost of the medical services they are obtaining.

Other key cost-related issues, she said, are state and federal mandates, taxes and fees.

ODI: In an introductory presentation, Ms. Froment told the panel the agency regulates insurers and agents across Ohio, and is pleased that Ohio is home to a robust insurance industry. The agency's goal is to assure consumer protection while promoting a stable and competitive environment.

She said Ohio is the sixth-largest state by premium volume, and represents the world's 17th-largest insurance market.

She told Rep. Michael Henne (R-Clayton) that the use of data analytics is at the center of the rate-setting process. Rates, she said, need to be tied to the risk of loss or expense.

Rep. Andy Brenner (R-Powell) asked how the department will be reviewing auto insurance rates with the expected increase in the use of automated vehicles.

Ms. Froment said that will be a big issue in the future, adding the agency expects the industry to come to an agreement the same way insurance issues were addressed with ride-sharing services like Uber.

Discussions on that front are ongoing with large auto insurers, she said. "We're seeing them come to the table with some really good ideas."

OAHP: Ms. Motter said her members want to promote quality care and affordable coverage.

She said 52% of Ohioans receive their coverage through employer-sponsored plans, and a majority of those employer plans are self-insured. That means local business leaders are often the ones determining the scope of coverage for the majority of Ohioans.

A key issue for insurers is the cost of health services, Ms. Motter said. "If health care is expensive, health insurance is expensive," she said.

Ms. Motter also said lawmakers can take another step to address Ohio's opioid problem by limiting the availability of medication that can be addictive. She said OAHP backs federal recommendations to reduce the number of pills that are issued to treat certain conditions.

She also told Rep. Wes Retherford (R-Middletown) that the group opposes budget language that would eliminate transparency reforms that were included in the previous budget bill.

Rep. John Bocchieri (D-Alliance) raised questions about the importance of having health insurance coverage be portable, given new research indicating that many young people will change jobs many times over their lives. Ms. Motter said that is an issue that can be discussed among member plans.

OII, AOLIC: Dean Fadel of the Ohio Insurance Institute and Greg Lestini, representing the Association of Ohio Life Insurance Companies, also briefed the committee on the role and scope of their members' industries.

Mr. Fadel said there are 972 property and casualty companies licensed to do business in Ohio, and strong competition helps keep the state's average rates well below national averages.

The state's average auto insurance rate is the 12th lowest, while the average homeowner's insurance rate is 30% less than the national average, he said.

He said the industry is a key economic driver, accounting for a significant number of employees and economic activity.

Mr. Fadel said the industry is pleased that a number of educational institutions have added insurance-related programs and certificates, saying that training is important to the industry's future in Ohio.

Mr. Lestini also said Ohio is fortunate to have some of the lowest-cost life insurance options available.

He said 40 life insurers are domiciled in the state, and all insurers have six million policies valued at $960 billion in place. Life insurance companies also make other contributions to the state by investing in mortgages and owning property, he said.

Mr. Lestini said Ohio is known as a stable state in terms of regulation, and it is important that the premium tax the industry pays is preserved. He also cautioned lawmakers against imposing new taxes on out-of-state insurers, saying the threat of retaliatory taxes could create issues for Ohio companies that sell policies elsewhere.

Subscribers Note: The presentations are available on the committee's website under Feb. 15.

Survey Shows Restaurant Owners Optimistic; Cedar Fair Has Record Fiscal Year; Diebold, DDR Report Financials

Restaurant owners and operators entered the new year with optimism after a strong finish to 2016, according to Ohio Restaurant Association survey results.

Restaurateurs in the state told ORA that they're planning for a 4% same-store sales increase in 2017 after experiencing an average 3% sales increase across the industry last year.

"The Ohio restaurant scene is dynamic with growth opportunities for concepts with outstanding brand positioning, great food, A+ guest service and flexible models that offer many customer touch points such as mobile ordering and delivery," ORA President and CEO John Barker said in a statement.

"Same-stores sales in Ohio during the fourth quarter were positive for our industry, up more than 3% as we experienced mild weather and strong traffic around the holidays," he added. "Growth slowed in January, but owners are bullish about the year due to strong consumer confidence and a soaring stock market."

About 80 restaurateurs throughout the state with an average of 2.5 restaurants and revenue per company of about $5.7 million replied to the survey, which also asked about food delivery utilization, food delivery impact, off-premise occasions, and food and labor cost outlooks.

Cedar Fair: The Sandusky-based theme park company continued to break records in 2016, ending the year with $1.29 billion in revenues.

It reported the revenues, which were up 4% from 2015, along with net income, that came in at $178 million, or $3.14 per diluted limited partner unit.
